Men and Scorpions
If Dictators Quarrel
Two Interesting Strikes
Will Government Finance Strikers?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

You have heard about the venomous "black widow" spider and the poisonous scorpion, the latter three times as big as the spider, that had carried on a death duel for several days in a garage at Long Beach, Cal.? Crowds came to watch.

An agent of the A. S. P. C. A. also came, and saw the spider wrapping the scorpion in spider web, each trying to sting and kill the other. Stopping "cruelty to animals" is the agent's business, so, with one heavy foot, he killed both spider and scorpion. The crowd went away disappointed. It had made bets.

Had the little fighters known about that A. S. P. C. A., they might have kept the peace. Will there develop, some day, on this earth a society for the prevention of cruelty to nations, organized for the prevention of war?

If big Russia and small Japan, comparable to the scorpion and spider and expected to start a war soon, knew that some S. P. C. A. or society for the prevention of war would come and squash them, would they keep peace, or MUST human beings fight?

You have read of that ferocious Turkish murderer, about to be executed, after a trial lasting three years. After he was jailed, for killing nearly a dozen men, he killed three fellow prisoners, because he did not like them. Man still ranks with savage beasts.

Not long ago, Mussolini and Hitler met, with all signs of amity eternal, at Venice. Hands were clasped, vows of friendship and co-operation exchanged. Mussolini was to visit Hitler at his country estate as soon as possible, and the world said: "How lovely to see a dictator brethern dwelling together in amity."

And now the Mussolini visit to Hitler is postponed indefinitely. Mussolini did not like the Dollfuss assassination, and seems to hold Hitler's Nazi friends responsible.

One danger for nations ruled by dictators or kings resides in the fact that if they meet and quarrel, their nations may meet on the battlefields later.

There was danger of war when Henry the Eighth and Francis the First met on the field of the cloth of gold, and Henry heard of Francis' indiscreet, joking question: "Quand donc, ce gros homme accoucheratil?" ("When will that fat man come to childbed?")

Europe discusses the expulsion of Mrs. Sinclair Lewis from Germany, as a forerunner of rigid press control. All copies of the London Times, in Germany, were recently seized and it is expected that foreign correspondents will be asked to leave if they write anything displeasing to Hitler. Engines would not last long without a safety valve, and liberty does not last long without free expression of opinion.

A brilliant Irishman, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, put in dramatically, 124 years ago: "Give them a corrupt House of Lords, give them a venal House of Commons, give them a tyrannical prince, give them a truckling court, and let me have but an unfettered press, I will defy them to encroach a hair's breadth upon the liberties of England."

Modern dictators need to encroach several hairs' breadth on established liberties and all agree with Napoleon, who said his power would last but a few weeks if he permitted freedom of the press.

One great German, Goethe, thought Germany made a poor use of free press. "What have the Germans gained by their boasted freedom of the press, except the liberty of abusing each other, as they like?"

And Heine, greatest Jewish poet outside the Old Testament, and a German, defined free thought as "the free expression of contempt for the thought of others."

Two interesting strikes: Workers on onion farms at McGuffey, O., were dissatisfied with wages alleged to be eight to 12 cents an hour. If you have weeded onions (this writer has done it), you know that eight cents an hour would be too little. The work done on hands and knees is hard on the back.

The strikers, accused of bombing the residence of the mayor of McGuffey, now find citizens turned against them, their leader kidnaped and badly beaten.

Mexico presents the other unusual strike, that of 62 radio operators, broadcasters and others. For 100 hours they held possession of the station, broadcasting continuously, telling

BARTON GIRL IS HURT IN CRASH

Betsy Batron, 16, of Foxboro, daughter of Bruce Barton, nationally known author, editor and advertising man, was in a critical condition at Putnam, Conn., hospital today, after an automobile which she was driving had plunged from the Providence-Danielson highway and overturned.

Surgeons feared today that Miss Barton's spine was fractured. Further examination, by X-ray, was to be made.

With Miss Barton at the time of the accident were her brother, Randall, 18, and E. J. Bullard of Wayland Manor, Providence.

Both suffered cuts and bruises.

2 Held in Horan Killing

GUSTIN GANG MAN PICKED BY GIRL

Two members of the Gustin gang, one of them identified by a woman witness, were rounded up as suspects today in the murder and robbery of John J. Horan, 55, of Massachusetts avenue, South End.

Immediately thereafter, Police Superintendent Martin H. King ordered a checkup of all taxi drivers, their waybills and other records in an effort to locate the driver of a cab that was seen near Horan's apartment building at the time he was shot Saturday.

Horan was believed to have lost his life because of his frequent boasts that he was soon to retire as a painter for the Boston Elevated Railway because he had a trunkful of money.

ONLY $800 IN TRUNK

The trunk hoard amounted to only $800, he told police before he died at City Hospital.

Superintendent King, Deputy Superintendent James McDevitt and Captain James R. Claflin of Warren avenue station conducted the series of grillings at the station.

The detective force, headed by Captain Stephen J. Flaherty, deployed through South End beer parlors to learn what they could of the crime they believe was planned in one of them. Many habitues of such places were questioned and later released during the day.

The suspected Gustin gnagster was picked from separate lineups by Miss Elizabeth Allen, 31, of Massachusetts avenue, South End.

SAW SUSPECT

According to Miss Allen's story, she was sitting on the front steps of her residence when she saw this man, whom she identified, come out of Horan's house "acting nervous and peculiar."

The man who was allegedly identified at the Warren avenut police station today afther having left Horan's South End placg of resie-

MILL STRIKE HEADS FIGHT REDS' AID

Developments today in the threatened general textile strike were:

1. Francis J. Gorman, general textile strike chairman, says nation-wide walkout will positively be called not later than Sept. 1.

2. Entrance of Anna Burlak, the "Red Flame," causes fear that Reds will cause strike disorders for which "regulars" will be blamed.

3. National ERA heads deny intention to "finance" the general textile strike by wholesale relief payments to strikers.

4. Detailed strike orders, timed for release Friday, reach regional leaders throughout New England.

5. Principal textile cities of New England see "famine time" coming, as welfare departments announce they cannot meet threatened strike emergency.

6. "Showdown" meeting of union leaders, maunfacturers, and federal mediators is called at Washington.

BULLETIN
By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 27—The strike committee of the United Textile Workers, with plans completed for a general strike in the cotton textile industry on September 4, or sooner, today began preparations for a similar walkout in the silk, rayon and woolen industries.

The red flag of Communism went up today on New England's cotton textile strike front—to the frank consternation of the United Textile Workers of America, who have called the general walkout for September 1 or before.

And it went up with a flourish—hoisted by one of the most flamboyant agitators ever to raise a voice in New England—Anna Burlak, "the Red Flame."

She was in Lowell and surrounding towns over the week-end, and this morning she had her "leftist" followers solidly aligned in favor of the strike.

LEADERS FEAR RED PERIL

As a result "regular" strike leaders admitted they were apprehensive about radical activities and disorders that would cast discredit on their cause and make their battle the harder to win.

Miss Burlak, however, being sort

Roads Ask $170,000,000 Freight Rate Increase

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 27—The larger railroads of the country asked the Interstate Commerce Commission today to authorize an $170,000,000 increase in the nation's freight bill.

Citing mounting costs, they pleaded for a general increase on every commodity and class of freight, ranging upward to 10 per cent on first-class freight. They said an estimated $294,000,000 increase in costs in 1935 would "jeopardize the solvency of a larger number of important railway systems" unless relief is given.

The proposed boosts touch all manufactured products, major farm products which of recent years have been exempted from increases, and products of forest and mine.

The petition was filed by the Association of Railway Executives for all Class 1 carriers—railroads doing $1,000,00 or more business a year. Similar petitions will be presented to all state railroad commissions, the proposal being to raise interstate rates also. An early hearing is asked.

The action is prompted, says the petition, by the restoration of the 10 per cent cut in railroad wages in 1932 and increasing costs of materials. The wage restoration is estimated to add $100,000,000 to costs this year, increasing to $16[illegible]00,000 in 1935, and material costs are expected to add $137,000,000 in 1935.

It is known that the carriers also are thinking of the $60,000,000 a year they say will be added to costs by the railroad retirement act should it be declared constitutional. This item, however, was omitted from the petition because court action is pending.

The petition took a shot at the railroad coordinator law. It scored a statement by the commission on July 31, 1933 that the carriers must make economies.

JOHNSON IRE CALMED IN WHITE HOUSE SESSION

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press)

Washington, Aug. 27—The deep-seated character of NRA'S latest troubles became apparent today when it was learned that General Hugh S. Johnson angrily walked out on last Monday's White House conference, resigned in writing, and reconsidered only on the firm insistence of President Roosevelt.

The dispute arose over an NRA reorganization plan submitted to the President by Donald Richberg, the NRA counsel, and Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor. Among other things, the plan was interpreted by Johnson as contemplating his own retirement to private life.

The General walked out when Mr. Roosevelt, seeking to sooth the ruffled spirits of his conferers, suggested that a decision be postponed, while Johnson took a rest and a trip to Europe.

The reconciliation, so far as Johnson is concerned, was consummated just before Mr. Roosevelt's departure Saturday for Hyde Park. Under its terms Johnson stays on on as administrator, and probably will become, later on, chairman of a board controlling NRA.

The implications respecting Mr. Richberg and Miss Perkins are less clear. Richberg's friends say he will remain the NRA counsel, although there will be no further doubt that Johnson is boss. Miss Perkins is expected to confine her activities more closely to the Labor Department.

The inside story of the incident, as related to the Associated Press authoritatively, is this:

Relations between Johnson and Richberg, although outwardly friendly, have been undergoing a change over a period of months. Johnson had heard whispers that people were saying it really was Richberg who ruled NRA. On his side, Richberg felt slighted when Johnson, last June, submitted a re-

of a flying Red agitator who crops up wherever a labor dispute is in the making, went blithely on with her program of speech-making and harrangues. She addressed members of the Textile Workers' Protective Union in Lowell, excorciating the NRA and concluding:

"Now is the time, Comrades! We can join with the United Textile to win the strike, and then wait. Don't go out until all the other unions decide to, and then co-operate with them in everything.

TROUBLE LOOMS AHEAD

"This is the chance for the worker. He must strike, and strike hard! We will have the capitalists at our mercy and they will never recover from the effects of what may happen."

In the last four years, Miss Burlak, although still young, has become the "Joan of Arc of the Radical wing of labor," not only in New England, but throughout the East and South.

She has been in the front line trenches in virtually every major strike in this section as well as in Paterson, N. J., Atlanta and other places.

She has been arrested time and again. Once she was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in Rhode Island, but was freed when she obtained a jury trial.

Efforts to deport her were futile as she was able to establish her American birth.

RAN FOR MAYOR

The girl with the flaming red hair once sought to become mayor of Pawtucket, and Governor Ely felt the lash of her tongue on Beacon Hill.

Pointing out that the woman had addressed a union that is not affiliated with them or the A. F. of L., strike leaders said they were afraid that the relatively "mild and conservative" tone of the "Red Flame's" speech was not to be counted on too heavily. Said one of them:

"The Reds may sympathize with us, but they'll do us no good if they come in on this strike. There will be trouble and we will have to shoulder the blame. It will make it twice as hard for us to win."

REFUTES SEPT. 4 CALL

Thomas F. McMahon, president of the union, today told strike organizers at New England headquarters in Pawtucket to ignore reports that the walk-out had been scheduled for Sept. 4, saying:

"Keep your men ready to go out on a minute's notice. When the order comes, it will be through official channels."

Among those at the Pawtucket meeting were Leonard Green, in charge of Southern Massachusetts; Thomas H. Kelley, Lowell and Lawrence, and Horace A. Riviere of Manchester, N. H., who is to direct strike activities in New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine.

WOULD CALL POLICE

Officially, New England strike headquarters refused to admit that there was any concern over Red activities. One union official, however, admitted:—

"An order went out to all locals last week, instructing them to call in the police at the first sign of any Red interference."

Drastic action by the government is now virtually the only hope of averting the strike.

Union officials also admitted that the problem of feeding strikers in the larger mill cities will also call for action on the part of Washington. They indicated that local and national union funds are low and that the workers will rely on the government's promise to aid them as it does other needy persons.

Indication that individual communities will be thrown upon their own resources in extending aid to destitute strikers was seen in an emphatic statement today from national ERA heads, denying that the general strike will be "financed" by wholesale federal doles to idle workers.

37,000 IN RHODE ISLAND

At the same time, in at least a score of Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire cities, officials admitted themselves facing a relief emergency which they have no financial means of meeting.

In Rhode Island, where it is claimed at least 37,000 mill workers will walk out, the economic horizon, as viewed by public welfare departments loomed particularly dark.

The city of Pawtucket, relief officials pointed out, already has almost 10 per cent of its its population on welfare rolls.

A general textile strike would double that figure, aid administrators say.

Reports today from other mill communities in Rhode Island and elsewhere showed them alarmed by a similar situation, with admittedly scant resources, public or private, to cope with it.

STRIKE CERTAIN

Meantime, as national labor leaders gave "positive assurance" that the general strike will be called not later than Sept. 1, federal authorities prepared today to exert all possible pressure for acceptance by manufacturers of a mediation plan.

Union officials have already agreed tentatively to presentation of their demands to the National Labor Relations Board.

At Washington, today, the N. L. R. board's chairman, William K. Garrison, has called a "showdown" meeting of workers' representatives and of manufacturers.

Today's move toward mediation followed flat rejection by the United Textile Workers of America of peace overtures made by the National Cotton Textile Industrial Relations board.

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the special strike committee, accused this board of being dominated by the textile manufacturers and pigeon-holing the union's complaints of violations of code labor provisions.

EARNINGS DECLINE

The union's grievances have been listed officially as:

"The stretch-out system has been so widely inaugurated throughout the industry as to constitute a sweeping and inhuman method of operation from which there must be relief.

"The volume of employment has declined steadily since immediately after the cotton textile code went into effect.

"Average weekly earnings have declined under the code.

"There has been a sweeping and intolerable practice of discharging workers for union affiliation in clear violation of Section 7-a of the Industrial Recovery Act."

The union's statements are in sharp conflict with the claims by industry of increased employment and higher payrolls under the cotton textile code.

22,000 Connecticut Mill Workers Ready to Strike

By International News Service

Plainville, Conn., Aug. 27—Connecticut textile workers numbering more than 22,000 will join the national textile strike when word is received from the general strike committee, it was announced today following a meeting here Sunday of more than 500 representatives from the state's 36 textile unions.

J. Nicholas Danz, organizer who will direct strike activities in this state, announced the meeting voted unanimously to join in the strike. He aded:

"We are all standing by waiting for the call."

Malden Justice Moves Fast

Augustine E. Luparelli of Worcester was arrested, tried and fined all in 30 minutes in Malden today.

Judge Flynn fined the man $25 for possessing gambling implements in his car and $5 for speeding. He paid $15 and was given two weeks in which to pay the remainder.

Police arrested him for speeding and discovered three slot machines in his car.

GIRL FLIERS IN NEAR-DISASTER

By Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 27—Despite near disaster which threatened to end their flight, two Texas girls passed the one-third mark early today in their attempt for a new woman's air endurance record.

The two, Mary Owens and Jean La Rene, accidentally threw overboard their reserve oil supply last night, believing it to be used lubricant. Then they brought their "Lone Star" low over the ground and gave a distress signal.

A note was hoisted by rope from their plane to the refueling ship, and soon six gallons of oil were lowered in the first refueling contact at dark since the flight started.

The girls took off at 8:13 p. m., Thursday. To pass the record, they must remain aloft until after 7:58 p. m., Sunday, Sept. 2.

France Declines to Free Switzes

Paris, Aug. 27 (INS)—The court of appeals today rejected a petition by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Switz of East Orange, N. J., for release from prison pending their trial on espionage charges. They have been held for months while a searching investigation has been in progress.

How Workers View Mill Strike Peril

On Saturday is scheduled the nation-wide strike of textile workers on a charge that employers refuse to recognize the union of United Textile Workers of America, under provisions of the NRA code.

What do the workers themselves think of this strike order, the operatives directly affected?

The Boston Evening American today begins a series in which are presented the viewpoints of these men and women—the textile workers—to whom the general strike call means everything.

NEW BEDFORD

Following are viewpoints of some of the workers in this city:

MISS MARY OSBORNE—It will be swell loafing. Then I'll be able to get that tan I've wanted all summer.

MANUEL VIERA—Strike? Why not? I'll not lose much more loafing than what I get for working three days a week.

MRS. MARY FRANCISCO—If the mill shuts down, I'll have to go back to the public welfare, and I hope that doesn't happen for the sake of my three children.

HARD ON FAMILY

THOMAS WIARSKI—If the gang goes out, I'll walk out.

JOHN WOOLEY—I don't know what they are striking for. It looks to me like we're playing right into the hands of the South.

MISS MARGARET LA LIBERTE—It will be hard on my family if the mill closes. I'm the only one working.

EUGENE GUILLMOTTE—Strike? Work? What's the difference? I'm not earning anything anyhow!

ANTONE RAPOZA—I think it's a shame to close the mills just when we are going to start on a full schedule.

JOHN PLATT—I should have got a job on the ERA, where I can make more money than in the mill.

SAMUEL ADAMSKI—What are they striking for?

JOAO V. COSTA—If I strike, my family will have to go to the poorhouse.

PHILIP LARRIVERE—I'm satisfied, but I'm not going to be called a scab. If my friends walk out, I'll do whatever they do.

COMMENTS VARY

All along this line, the comments went, some of the workers declaring frankly that they did not mind loafing for a time, and some being considerably concerned over the possibility.

Jose Alves proved to be an optimist.

"Starve working; starve loafing," he commented. "What's the difference?"

"If there is a strike," said Mrs. Angelina Moreau, "I hope the weather is warm."

Frank Rezendes was loyal to his employers and to the work continuation generally.

"I think," he said, "that the mills have been using us pretty good and it's a shame to walk out on them just when the market is turning for the better."

Other comments, in varying conception, were by the following:

ALFRED GAUTHIER—For the sake of my family, I'd hate to see a strike.

MISS FLORENCE CATLOW—My father and two sisters, besides myself, work in the mill and none of us wants to walk out. I think the strike is foolish.

CHARLES GAMACHE—The only strike talk I've been hearing is in the papers. There surely hasn't been any where I work.

GANG SEEKS KIDNAPERS OF BRIDAL PAIR

Tyler, Tex., Aug. 27—A 19-year-old youth accused of kidnaping a bride and groom and attacking the former, was held in an undisclosed city today, following threats of mob violence.

A large crowd gathered at the jail when the suspect, who gave his name as J. D. Willis, 19, was brought here from Palestine, where he had been arrested. He was hurriedly spirited away by sheriff's officers after the victims, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Herring, had identified him as the attacker.

Willis was identified by police as an ex-convict from Louisiana.

The Herrings said they were accosted near here Saturday night by a man who forced them, at pistol point, to drive to a secluded spot.

After stripping Herring of all his clothing except his underwear and tying him to a tree, the man forced Mrs. Herring to disrobe. She said he attacked her and then tied her to a tree with wire.

He fled in his victims' motor car, which was rcovered at Palestine. Officers said they also found Mrs. Herring's engagement ring and a quantity of money.

'LITTLE EVA'S' DEFENSE TOLD

By Universal Service

Cooperstown, N. Y., Aug. 27—"Little Eva" Coo's defense for the "haunted house" murder mystery will be:

"Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

The defense will attempt to present evidence from a woman who allegedly saw a man at the "haunted house" the night Harry Wright was crushed to death by a heavy automobile, driven by Martha Clift. The defense has contended all along that Harry Nabinger, Eva's last lover, is implicated in the mystery.

The "mystery witness" is the wife of a state's witness. She says she saw strangers at the house at the hour Wright was killed, and that a man was in the group. The woman, however, was mentally ill for several months in a hospital, and the value of her testimony is problematical.

$800 Goods Stolen at Magnolia Store

Magnolia, Aug. 27—While the gem thieves who made away with the $300,000 in jewels last July were still being sought here, thieves broke into the Magnolia shop of William Filene's Sons, Lexington avenue, and stole goods, mostly silk underwear, valued at $800.

Discovery of the break was made by the manager when he noticed the door had been jimmied. Police today expressed the belief that the theft was committed by amateurs.

Colonel House Is Silent on New League

Colonel Edward M. House, "silent man of the Wilson administration" and warm supporter of President Roosevelt, today declined to comment on either the purposes or the personnel of the new American Liberty League.

The colonel, however, took occasion to discredit reports that he had received a visit from former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, one of the league's founders. He said:

"There is absolutely no truth to the report that former Governor Smith has been to see me."

2 MEN HELD IN HORAN KILLING

dence Saturday was picked twice from lineups by Miss Elizabeth Allen, 31, of Massachusetts avenue, South End.

He is a well-known underworld character, according to police, and has be enunder surveillance for more than a week in connection with the beating of a South Boston patrolman.

Horan's trunk threasure-box, the oft-boasted contents of which cost him his life, police believe, was found in a vacant lot on Guild street, Roxbury.

RESERVE NOTES

The money stole n from the trunk, according to a broadcast sent out today, consisted of $20 bills issued by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston in 1922.

Questioning of alleged women frieneds of Horan's followed a conference at police headquarters between detectives and Mrs. Ellen Horan, estranged wife of the slain painter.

Mrs. Horan, now employed as matron at the Brighton police station, left her husband, she said, on account of his drink ing habits.

What she told officers at headquarters was not revealed, but immediately following the interview, plainclothesmen began a search for the feminine witnesses who later told of the $10,000-in-my-trunk-at-home boast.

Horan's known eccentricity may have been caused, police were told, by an injury which he received in a fall, while on a painting job, two years ago.

SUFFERED SPELLS

Since that time, according to acquaintances, he was subject to recurrent "spells," usually suffered while drinking.

Police were engaged today in a tour of South End drinking places, at one of which it is believed the plot to beat or kill Horan and loot his treasure trunk was hatched.

An empty whiskey bottle, found near the trunk after it had been emptied and discarded in Roxbury, is a possible clue to the "joint" where the killers may have met.

Man Saved in Fall by Fellow Worker

Possible death of John J. Buckley, 22, of Phoenixville, Pa., was prevented by Joseph Kirby, 42, of Philadelphia, after the former fell from a bridge pier and landed on him.

Buckley was working on a railroad bridge on Washington street, West Newton, when he slipped and fell into a ditch. His fall was broken when he landed on Kirby, who was working in the ditch at the time. Buckley received minor cuts and bruises and Kirby resumed work with a sprained back.

organization plan to the White House without giving him a copy.

Acting under the President's later authorization to draft a program for general co-ordination of all recovery activities, Richberg prepared plans of his own for NRA. Miss Perkins became interested because of the labor angles. Together they saw the President last Monday.

APPEAL TO ROOSEVELT

Later that day they were asked to return. Johnson also was present. He told the President bluntly that he felt an effort was being made to drive him out of NRA. There were denials and further words. Finally, Mr. Roosevelt suggested that the general needed a real rest after his unremitting service, and might take a vacation trip abroad, surveying meantime recovery efforts in Europe.

Johnson exploded. He said he would do no such thing, and without ceremony, departed. An hour later Richberg and Miss Perkins slipped out of a side door, evading questioners.

Late that night, just before the President retired, he received a letter from General Johnson, delivered by messenger. It covered three typewritten pages. It recalled Johnson's labors for NRA, paid his respects to his enemies, stated directly his determination to quit, and ended with one of Mr. Roosevelt's own favorite Latin phrases meaning, in free translation, "The situation speaks for itself."

ROOSEVELT PROTESTS

The President replied at once. Writing in long-hand, he reiterated his regard and appreciation, asked the resignation be withdrawn, and, returning proverb for proverb, said he liked that old saying that friends always must be friends.

So matters stood when the President left Tuesday for Illinois, to attend the funeral of Speaker Rainey. It was because of this undetermined situation that he changed an already-announced plan, and returned from Illinois to Washington, instead of going straight to Hyde Park.

He saw Johnson again and the break was healed. He did insist, however,th at the general take two weeks rest, and Johnson consented, and departed for the beach. At the end of the two weeks he will see the President at Hyde Park, and they will settle details of the new NRA set-up. And in it the fiery soldier will have first rank.

This does not mean a break between Richberg and the President, or between Miss Perkins and the President. In her own field, Mr. Roosevelt highly regards the Secretary of Labor. He greatly admires Richberg, and will have other work for him should he retire from NRA. He even is said to have him in mind for elevation, some day, to the Supreme Court.

For Johnson it means he will be staying on when he had been planning for months to get out.

Richberg Reports Jobs Up 4,120,000

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 27—President Roosevelt has received a report saying employment has increased 4,120,000 since he took office. The document, submitted by Donald R. Richberg as head of the Executive Council, also cites to show a substantial business advance, and declares that in this improvement NRA was a "dominant influence."

"Reliable figures," said the report, made public last night, "indictate that 40,180,000 persons were employed in the United States in June, 1934, an increase of 4,120,000 over the low figures of March, 1933, and an increase of 2,320,000 over June, 1933. The latter increase is due mainly to shortening of hours under NRA codes."

The report said the purchasing power of the average worker in manufacture remained practically unchanged, but that there was an average reduction of six hours in the industrial work week.

BOSTON DUCHESS NEVER TO RETURN TO BLENHEIM CASTLE

COTTAGE EXILE LAID TO ROW WITH DUKE

By International News Service

Oxford, England, Aug. 27—The young Duke of Marlborough and the Dowager Duchess of Marlborough have agreed on one thing, that the dowager, in spite of her rights in that direction, is never to return to Blenheim Castle, the family seat, it was learned today.

Gladys Deacon

That and her present inclination for solitude, accounts for the dowager duchess, who was Gladys Deacon, of Boston living with her 80 dogs, all spaniels, in a sequestered farm house near Mixbury.

It also accounts for the fact that the tall, willowy mother of the duke, the former Consuelo Vanderbilt, who was once the duchess herself, again rules the Marlborough menage, which at present happens to be a shooting box in Scotland.

EXILE VOLUNTARY

The dowager's sequestration at Mixbury was entirely voluntary and began after her row with her husband, the ninth Duke of Marlborough.

But stepmother and stepson never attempted to have her reone another, International News Service learned from a source well informed as to the affairs of both.

The new duke, although recognizing the widow's right to reside in Blenheim is secretly pleased at the present arrangement and has never attempted to hav her return.

The lack of affection was emphasized recently by friends of the duke who went out of their way to deny flatly that Gladys Deacon was a bridesmaid at the most famous of transatlantic weddings when the 18-year-old Consuelo became th wife of the far older duke 1895.

CASTLE IS ACTIVE

Blenheim today is bustling with preparations for the tenth duke to take up his residence there for the first time since his father's death a few months ago.

His town house, 7 Carleton House terrace, has gone on the market since the memorable battle between Gladys and her husband in which it was discovered that she was holding the fort there without gas or electricity and cooking her own meals on an oil stove by candlelight.

The young Duke is at Strathavon Lodge, Ballindalock, Banffshire, Scotland, for the grouse shooting, with Consuelo, they being most devoted to one another.

—NEAR—YET FAR

Only twenty miles of undulating Oxfordshire separate magnificent Blenheim with its big park and formal gardens and the ancient farmhouse at Mixbury—but they are a thousand miles apart in luxury.

But the dowager duchess is nonethe-less happy. With a single companion, an old friend, Miss Grills, and an old servant-woman, the dowager duchess lives in a quaint little thatch-roofed oak-beamed lowraftered cottage.

LIKED BY RESIDENTS

She is well liked by the neighbors who, nevertheless, consider her an eccentric, often remarking, "er darsent look like a duchess." Actually she is very plainly and even carelessly garbed and groomed. She appears in public in kitchen dresses.

The dowager duchess was most annoyed at the revelation of her identity. She threatened to drench his correspondent with a pail of water, as she is reported to have done to an English girl reporter.

Still she persists in using "Mrs. Spencer Churchill," the Marlborough family name. The townsfolk now think her reason is not so much a desire for incognito as a growing distaste for the title for which she became an expatriate and entered an unhappy marriage.

LORD EDDIE MONTAGU

BETTY GOES NATIVE— AND THE HOUSE CLOSES!

By International News Service

Maidenhead, England, Aug. 27—Lord Edward Montagu, heir of the Duke of Manchester, has given up the idea of joining the Foreign Legion and has become, instead, proprietor of a portable coffee shop.

But his first adventure as a purveyor of Java almost kiboshed when the gala opening was marred by a battle between "Countess" Betty Dumas and another girl, which forced a premature closing on the opening night.

GLORY DREAM FADES

Since the inglorious result of his pseudo-heroic gesture of three weeks ago when he announced at a drinking party that he was going to join the Foreign Legion and seek glory on the field of battle and the sands of the Sahara and left for France only to return the next day, Montagu has been loafing about Maidenhead with Betty and other friends, boating, bathing and partying.

This week-end, however, he suddenly blossomed forth as a businessman behind the counter of a coffee shop built within a large auto trailer which he parked on the Great West road directly opposite the entrance of the Hungary River Club, most fashionable place in the resort.

HAIR-PULLING TILT

With Betty and Peggy Bevan behind the counter it was but a few minutes before a gay throng of evening-dressed revellers from the Hungary gathered about Eddie's wagon, shouting, joking and teasing.

Suddenly Betty, angered by good-natured taunting, rushed up to an unidentified girl in the crowd and let fly a left hook. The girl retaliated with a right jab. A moment later the two were hair pulling, clawing and scratching until they were finally separated by the others.

The gala opening was ruined. The revellers disappeared toward the Hungary, while Eddie sorrowfully towed the trailer away.

TOILER BURNED IN EXPLOSION

Burns from which he may die were suffered today by George H. Williams, 35, of Shawmut avenue, Roxbury, when a cleasing fluid he was using on the floors of a Back Bay apartment exploded.

Williams was in the apartment of Frank F. Fletcher at 50 Commonwealth avenue when the cleansing fluid exploded. In attempting to extinguish the fire which started the workman suffered further burns.

Policemen carried him to the street and took him to City Hospital, while firemen were extinguishing the $1000 fire in the apartment. At the hospital, Williams' name was placed on the danger list.

JAIL-BREAKER IS CAPTURED

"Sheik Bandit" Dilfred Robicaud, for 24 hours a fugitive from the Concord Reformatory, was taken into custody without a struggle today as trudged along a country road.

Elsewhere, more than 50 armed officers, equipped with searchlights, were beating thickets and wading swamps within a woodland area about which they had thrown a cordon of guards.

Two reformatory attendants, who knew Robichaud by sight, picked him up near Nine Acres corner, several miles from the reformatory farm, from which he made his escape. He did not resist capture.

250 CCC Workers Saved From Blast

Andover, Aug. 27—Foresight of army engineers saved 250 CCC members from death, it was revealed today as the fire marshal's office investigated a dynamite blast at Camp 197, near the North Reading line.

Four hundred pounds of the powerful explosive, cached on the outskirts of the camp, went off with a terrific detonation. The explosion gouged out a hole 50 feet long and 20 feet deep.

EBELL INQUEST REPORT DUE LATE TODAY

Disposal of death charges against Mrs. Helen Ebell of Brookline and Louis Goldsmith of Roxbury, both held in the death of Hans Ebell, Boston pianist and composer, hinged today on a coroner's report at Norwich, Conn.

Mrs. Ebell is charged with being an accessory to murder of her divorced husband. Goldsmith is charged with the murder. Both are charged with kidnaping Helen Alice Ebell, 9, the daughter over whose custody Ebell lost his life at a children's camp on Gardner Lake, Conn.

The inquest report is due from Coroner Edward G. McKay. It will contain testimony of pretty girl counsellors, who witnessed the death struggle over the little girl a week ago Saturday.

KIDNAP CHARGE STANDS

Coroner McKay said today there were a few legal issues to be looked up before the report will be released. He said he expected its completion late today or tomorrow, just before the couple are to be arraigned in district court at Montville, Conn.

Trooper John M. Smith of the Connecticut state police has indicated that murder charges might be replaced by manslaughter complaints in the event of a criminal finding by the coroner. He added, however, that the kidnaping charges against both "still hold and will hold."

Goldsmith and Mrs. Ebell are at the county jail in New London, the former without bail and Mrs. Ebell for lack of $10,000. The kidnaping charges are based on a Connecticut law that makes it a penal offense for one estranged parent to take a minor child from custody of the other.

STATE LINE IS ISSUE

Fine legal points are entailed in the word "custody." The case will introduce the Massachusetts divorce decree granted Mrs. Ebell two years ago.

Another technical point involves the death of Ebell before his divorced wife crossed the state line into Rhode Island with her child.

Attorney Lawrence P. McHugh, counsel for Mrs. Ebell, said he will argue that the death of the father before the crossing of the state line would automatically clear his client of the kidnap charge.

GIRL KILLED IN CYCLE CRASH

On an early morning motorcycle ride for cigarettes, which was extended into a longer trip, Mrs. Helen F. Getman, 25-year-old mother and ERA worker, of Myrtle street, West End, was hurled 50 feet today and killed at Mt. Auburn and Common streets, Watertown.

Herbert Lawson, 25, of Ridgebury boulevard, Mayfield Heights, O., her companion, was slightly injured.

Fernando H. Suarez, 55, of Orchard street, Watertown, driver of an auto that was in collision with the motorcycle, was held in $5000 on charges of drunkenness, operating while under the influence of liquor, manslaughter, operating so as to endanger and with leaving the scene of an accident without making his identity known.

The dead girl's father, Jacob Forsen of Highland street, Waltham, revealed that his daughter had been planning to divorce Getman, who is in state prison, and marry an aviator flying out of Boston airport.

Real Gun Puts Woeful End to Play Cowboys' Prank

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 27—Togged out in chaps and sombreros, two Lynbrook, L. I., boys gave 500,000 Coney Island visitors their impression of a couple of rip-roarin' cowboys "goin' to town," and they made the act so realistic that one of them faces arraignment today for violating the Sullivan law governing the carrying of weapons.

During the week George Spangler, 20, has been leading the uneventful life of a butcher boy. Between calls he read stories of the West, and forthwith sent for a cowboy outfit. Fourteen-year-old Sol Wozar caught the bug and he too obtained a suit.

The pair went to Coney Island. George tucked a .32-calibre revolver in a holster. And Sol felt somewhat out of place because he had only a water pistol. The boys put on a yelling act on the boardwalk, until an onlooker discovered that George had a real gun, and telephoned the police.

The Kellys have been summering in Belgrade, Me., and it could not be determined just how long the water had been leaking.

Van Meter Death Tip Now Traced to Dillinger Gang

Girls Linked in Tip-Off Under Constant Police Guard

By Universal Service

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 27—Homer Van Meter was slain by the authorities because his fellow-Dillinger gangsters wanted him killed by them.

This was the surprising conclusion reached here after a series of sudden, mysterious movements by local police heads and federal operatives in search of George "Baby Face" Nelson, last of the Dillinger henchmen.

BETRAYED BY PALS.

Gangdon does its own killing when it wants silence for its safety.

But in this case, it is now believed that Van Meter was betrayed into the hands of police by his pals in order to throw pursuers off the trail of the remaining outlaws, and to make possible their getaway with the considerable bank and kidnaping loot that they have accumulated.

Nelson is especially wanted because he was said to have been very close to the vicinity where Van Meter was stalked and shot down last Thursday.

GIRL FRIEND IS HELD

Nelson came to St. Paul a fortnight ago. Whether he was pursuing Van Meter or not is unknown.

OPAL MELIGA

MARION CONFORTI

But his arrival was more than a coincidence with the presence here of the slain Van Meter, who had come to pick up the loot he had left with a local underworld character or fence, and obtained from a South Dakota bank robbery.

Mrs. Opal Meliga, alleged woman friend of Van Meter's, is being held without charges for questioning regarding the personal habits of the slain Dillinger's desperadoes, still at liberty. This information is expected to lead to the complete roundup of the gangsters. Marion Conforti, also linked as a girl friend of the slain underworld ace, was under police guard at her home.

The most recent developments here have discredited the earlier reports that it was Mrs. Meliga who made it possible for the authorities to "get" Van Meter.

Meanwhile Chief of Police Frank Cullen and Detective Thomas Brown, both of whom directed the laying of the trap which ended Van Meter's life, have been absent from this city since Friday.

HAMILTON FEARED DEAD

Their departure was associated with the search that has been going on along the southern section of Minnesota-Wisconsin borderline for the grave supposed to hold the remains of John Hamilton, Dillinger henchman.

Hamilton was thought to have been fatally wounded when the desperadoes escaped from their hangout at the Little Bohemia lodge in Northern Wisconsin last April.

HITLER PLANS TO WIN BACK SAAR SOON

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

Coblentz, Germany, Aug. 27—Germany will win back the Saar in January's plebiscite and then the Reich can make peace with France, Chancellor Adolf Hitler predicted here addressing a multitude of 500,000 assembled for a "Saar Day" demonstration.

The Nazi dictator, pledging the loyal efforts of his government to obtain recovery of the rich territory lost in the war, told the throng which gathered on rocky Ehrenbreitstein:

"The Saar is the only territorial question still separating us from France. After its solution there is no more reasonable cause for enmity between the two great nations."

Denouncing the attacks of hostile elements in the Saarland who oppose reunion with the Reich, the master of Germany cried:

"We are going to win! One Judas did not prevent Christianity!"

SAYS BOYCOTT FAILS

Economic boycott, aimed at his country by Jewish organizations in many countries, is doomed to failure, Hitler said.

Hitler launched into his address by lambasting the "international cliques" who have sympathized with Germany under Nazi rule. He said:

"They tortured Germany for 15 years and made Germany unhappy. Now they express sympathy. I believe the international cliques only wish harm to Germany.

"If certain movements in the world believe they can force us to our knees by terror or economic boycott, they don't know us. If they force us to do so, we will show how we can stand on our own legs economically."

Turning to the charge that Christianity is persecuted under the Nazi government, Hitler said:

"Certain quarters reproach us for drifting from Christianity. The contrary is true. We are only carrying out the strict separation of religious from political questions. The state has not interfered with individual denominations.

PRIESTS GIVE AID

"Tens of thousands of priests are gladly co-operating with the state. I am convinced that others soon will follow. Our fight against atheism and class war is practical Christianity."

There was something of the flavor of the ex-Kaiser's famous formula of "Me and God" in the Fuehrer's next declaration:

"The success of our political fight has not lacked God's blessing. When I started 15 years ago with seven men, nobody in this world was for me. Today 38 million Germans are behind me!

"Does the world believe that they would be behind me if they were not inwardly happy? What does 10 per cent opposition prove? Before our time, 10 Germans had 10 different opinions. Today, nine out of 10 have the same opinion. I am convinced we will succeed also in winning the 10th man."

Hitler returned to Berlin by plane this afternoon.

ONION STRIKER DEFIES KIDNAP

McGuffey, O., Aug. 27—Vigilantes patrolled the Scioto marshlands today, pledged to retaliate for strike violence, as an Onion Workers' Union leader, abducted once, dared his enemies to kidnap him again.

Okey Odell, president of the Agricultural Workers' Union and leader of striking onion marsh weeders, said:

"Let them come. I'd give $500 a head for any who got away alive."

Non-striking onion weeders mustered a "vigilance committee" of 300 "indignant workers," formed secretly, leaders said, to "retaliate for any further violence" and to rid the community of "undesirable strikers."

Still abed with injuries suffered Saturday when he was snatched from the custody of peace officers and beaten by a group described as "non-union sympathizers," Odell insisted he would ask federal prosecution today for the men who mistreated him.

their story, asking for public sympathy. That is new. One Mexican broadcaster, Ramon Perez, "as thin as Mahatma Gandhi," went 104 hours without food, did not sleep and continued broadcasting during the entire time. Such energy deserves success, and got it.

The Pan-American Radio Company paid the strikers' claims in full, including back pay, and asks permission to go into liquidation, and quit business. If it does that, under Mexican law, receivers, already appointed, may turn the whole plant over to the workers. "Other countries, other manners."

We may come to that here or something like it. Leaders of an important textile strike, to be called next week, announce in Atlanta that they "expect the federal government to see them through the strike and finance them."

The leaders say the government has pledged itself "to let no one go hungry," so this is a good time for strikers. Hitherto strikes have been lost because union funds could no longer take care of strikers and their families.

With government funds to call on, strikes might last indefinitely. If strikers should, on the Mexican plan, be allowed to take over any plant ceasing to operate, that would end the "lockout." It would test also the contention of some managers of industries that the workers would not be able to manage the industry profitably. Even were it turned over to them.

Sinclair Lewis' Wife Says Hitler Rage Led to Ouster

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

Paris, Aug. 27—Dorothy Thompson, American journalist and wife of Sinclair Lewis, in Paris today after being expelled from Germany, declared she believes Chancellor Adolf Hitler's personal resentment at being termed a "hysteric" in an article she wrote for Cosmopolitan Magazine was responsible for the Nazi action against her.

Looking entirely unperturbed as she chatted about Germany and Hitler in her hotel suite, she declared that since the article referred to was written some time ago, she would not be surprised if her's was the forerunner of similar expulsions for many other foreign writers.

A great number of foreigners have written articles highly critical of the Nazi regime, she said, adding:

"From all I could learn before my rather hasty departure last night from Berlin, it was personal rage which singled me out of many others who have been criticizing Hitler.

"When I sought to find out exactly who was behind the order, I was informed it came from 'highest authority' which presume must mean Hitler—for who else can be the highest authority in Germany today?"

Miss Thompson said she had no intention of seeking revocation of the expulsion order, nor of going back into Germany as long as Hitler remained in power, but would sail for America September 7 on the Leviathan. Discussing the Nazi situation, she said:

"Germany today is definitely in the hands of one man and even the four million who voted against him in the plebiscite can't do anything about it.

"It is a national psychosis, resulting from the feeling cultivated by the Nazis that Germany is surrounded by enemies and that Hitler is the messiah sent down to save the country."

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

SLEEP ASSURED FOR MATTAPAN

John J. Griffin, of Edson street, Mattapan, was probably late for work this morning, but the neighbors had their first full night's sleep in a month.

Mr. Griffin is deaf, is obliged to get up at 4.30 a. m. and is an inventor. Out of these three facts developed a situation which threatened to ruin the peace of the neighborhood.

Because of his infirmity, Mr. Griffin cannot hear the garden variety of alarm clock, so he rigged up a more or less wonderful attachment by which the conventional alarm was replaced by the raucous blast of an auto horn.

If it succeeded in waking up Mr. Griffin—and it did—it also woke up practically everybody else for blocks around.

Weary police sleuths tried to trace the source of the "ghostly" noises at the behest of neighbors. The hunt was unsuccessful until a policeman accidentally stumbled into Mr. Griffin's home. He told all.

SUICIDE PICKS HORNETS' NEST

Tampa, Aug. 27—The stings of scores of hornets killed Ramon Perez, 34, unemployed Tampa cigar maker, who leaped nude into a colony of the insects with the avowed intention of killing himself.

Perez died here after suffering agonizing pain from the stings for hours. Perez was in the swarm of hornets for about ten minutes.

While someone called the fire department, Perez' mother, Mrs. C. Perez, rushed to the aid of her son. He refused to heed her appeal to flee. Finally, after firemen had begun burning weeds in order to smoke out the hornets, she dragged him from the lot.

Every part of his body was distorted to more than twice normal size. He refused medical treatment, telling hospital attendants he had plunged into the hornets' nest purposely.

Barbara Holmes gives her patrons a card of introduction from the bureau to the agency or person offering the rental.

Doug Cancels Yacht Trip to See Ranch With Mary

By Universal Service

Hollywood, Aug. 27—Before most of Hollywood was awake a large car whizzed through the gates of Pickfair, atop a Beverly Hills peak.

A tanned, dapper little man leaped out to meet a golden-haired woman walking across the lawn.

He was Douglas Fairbanks. She was Mary Pickford.

He took her by the hand, the woman to whom he was married for 16 years—and they stepped into the car.

They turned toward the beach and followed the coastline down to the actor's ranch, Zorro, near San Diego. There they talked for hours among the cattle and horses and flowers.

Long ago they used to ride there together when the world called them filmdom's "ideal married couple."

GOODWIN NAMES ELY TOOL OF LEAGUE

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Renewed attacks by former Mayor James M. Curley on the newly organized national bi-partisan American Liberty League and a scathing denunciation of its founders by Frank A. Goodwin establishes the League more firmly as the dominant issue of the Democratic contest for Governor.

Goodwin, Republican, Democratic and Independent candidate for the front office at the State House, at a clam bake of the North Abington Post of the American Legion, characterized the new corporation as the "Bankers and Exploiters Liberty League."

MORGAN AT THE HELM

And referring to the report that Governor Ely would head the New England division, denied by the Governor, Goodwin said:

"That is where we expect him to be. His buddies are all there."

Goodwin charged that the American Liberty League, like the National Economy League, was born and operated in the office of J. P. Morgan.

He asserted that the party of Jefferson, which put human rights above dollars has been dominated for years by the "Morgan through their errand boys, John W. Davis, Al Smith, John Raskob and others." He said:

"In Massachusetts the Morgan annex is Ropes, Gray, Boyden and Perkins and its errand boy is Joseph B. Ely in the Democratic party and John Richardson in the Republican party.

"How any intelligent American can be fooled by this political shell-game is beyond comprehension. This new Liberty League is the same old Economy League dressed up in new clothes and false whiskers."

ATTACKS COLE

Former Mayor Curley contended that the doctrine announced by the league "is the doctrine of Alexander Hamilton, regarded as the saint of the Republican party, whose fundamental belief was that property rights were paramount to human rights."

Every one who believes different, Curley declared, is in duty bound to take up the challenge at the polls on primary day.

"My Democratic opponent (General Cole) for the nomination for the governorship selected by certain proponents of the property right theory cannot in justice to the obligation which he owes his political sponsors, do other than oppose the policies of President Roosevelt."

"WALL STREET LEAGUE"

He pointed out that President Roosevelt has never failed to reverse his action upon a public question when convinced that the course pursued was inimical to the interests of the people and nation. He said:

"The Wall Street League was not necessary to a change of course by President Roosevelt. And so far as one may gather, substantially every defect in the NRA and the AAA, to which reference has been made, would unquestionably be revised when in the judgment of the President such a course was essential to America and its people."

SPEAKS TO 25,000

The speech of the former mayor on the league was delivered to more than 25,000 people in nine cities, which included Fall River and New Bedford.

He was the only candidate in the contest invited to address 1500 members of the Eagles at a joint Fall River and New Bedford clam bake in the latter city.

Cheers greeted his reiteration of the statement:

"I desire to ask the candidate of the Worcester steam-roller convention (Cole) at this time if he concurs in the original statement with reference to the position taken by His Excellency, the Governor, as New England leader of the American Liberty League, or with the possibly later revised statement in which he will deny affiliation or claim that he has again been misquoted."

Lovesick Cellini, Fleeing Foe, Finds Virginia

Happiness of Famed Couple Was Short

By JOHN ERSKINE

Four hundred years ago and a little more, during the winter of 1533-1534, to be precise, the Pope, having seen an exquisite chalice, the work of Benvenuto Cellini, commissioned that talented goldsmith to fashion a reliquary in which the Host might be carried. Which the man did, and other things besides. It was his way to give good measure, once he had been commanded, and while completing the reliquary he set himself, as he tells us, to make the Pope's portrait on a medal, and first of all he had to make the steel dies for both sides of it. At this time also he made love to Virginia.

Even if these varieties of effort seem unrelated, who shall say they really were? Benvenuto himself, who had an eye for coincidence, recognized the hand of God in unexpected places. Had he not been serving the Pope he might have stayed in his native Florence, but if he had stayed in Florence he would not have discovered the charm of Virginia, whom the will of Heaven had located somewhat obscurely in Rome.

Benvenuto's simple faith has not received from careless readers the credit it deserves. In the ordinary channels of piety he was correct, and his moral honesty was unusual. Who is without frailties? He recognized his for what they were, never trying to elude conscience by blinking a fault. He committed few murders without hoping he might be forgiven. In moments of extreme danger he improvised eloquent prayers, as he could not have done had he not been well brought up, and if we may believe his own testimony, once when he was in jail he studied the Bible.

HIS FAITHFUL ASSISTANT

But beyond these spiritual supports he relied with confidence upon the central unity of life, especially of his own life, which he hugely enjoyed—all things in it working together for good. There would be moments, of course, to which a hasty opinion might ascribe no concatenating usefulness. For a while it seemed a mistake to arouse the Pope's interest in the portrait medal, with so much work already on hand, and the presence of Ascanio in the shop made any work difficult. Ascanio was an assistant, faithful but incompetent, whom he had brought from Florence. At times he wondered why. When he was out one day, Ascanio sold a ring to a notary named Ser Benedetto, who was a friend of a certain prominent citizen who had access to the Pope, and because Ser Benedetto was so well connected Ascanio didn't like to ask for a cash payment, so there was no payment at all. Whenever Benvenuto was over-tired and irritated, he would urge Ascanio to complete the transaction by collecting the money and Ascanio would promise to immediately after the next daybreak.

For a while it seemed as though Ascanio would be of little aid in the matter of Virginia. Virginia lived with her mother, who was called Maria. Small wonder that a good man should be drawn to a house where the family names sounded of chastity. Benvenuto admired Maria, who was beautiful and not old, until he met Virginia, who was beautiful and much younger, and from that moment the mother was in the way, and Ascanio might have distracted her attention, had he been gifted with social tact. But the honest fellow would knock at the door, of an evening, and ask Maria if Benvenuto had come home yet from his walk with Virginia, when Virginia had got permission to leave the house after dark only by swearing she wished to visit the sick.

A HEART UNTRAINED

In a sense Benvenuto was sick, but it was the pleasantest of maladies. Virginia had black eyes, white teeth, a figure which curved in and out at the right places, and a heart though untrained was disposed to learn. Benvenuto was a handsome man, with an adorable beard, and a voice rich in what the technical call overtones, and he had better things to talk to her about than sculpture or metal work. Though her mother's prejudice made their meetings furtive, it isn't after all the length of the rendezvous which counts.

Just when he was wondering whether he ought not to elope with the girl back to Florence, and even marry her, and send on the Pope's portrait when and if he had time to get it, Maria came on the lovers one night in the shadows of the Coliseum. Benvenuto explained that he was making an experiment in necromancy, but the mother believed her eyes. When next he called at the house, it was empty. She had fled with Virginia to save what was left.

SEARCHED THROUGH TOWNS

For two months he went looking through the hill towns and villages, and though he saw many a good-looking girl, it wasn't the right one. He would have continued the search if the Pope had not worried about his portrait and demanded evidence of progress. Benvenuto, as we intimated before, respected the Pope, who had, moreover, an effective police department. For once the unity of life didn't hold. Virginia was lost. In her place, nothing but the toil of the shop, and the inescapable society of Ascanio!

Yet precisely at this point the demonstration of progress began. Mad with grief, Benvenuto cursed Ascanio for letting Ser Bendetto steal the ring, and Ascanio protested that the gentleman didn't steal it, and Benvenuto said then the thief must be Ascanio, for one or the other was holding the money back.

Ascanio, seeing that his employer was in earnest at last, started to collect the bill, and being without courage, he pretended to be bold, and over-acting, through inexperience, went on from firmness to insult, until Ser Benedetto drew a knife and would have slit his throat, had he not run. Thereupon Ser Benedetto, unwilling to put the knife away unused, walked the streets until he met Benvenuto, who when he saw the knife coming, reminded the notary that Ascanio handled all the money matters of the firm, but the notary swore he'd as soon kill one rascal as another, so they began to argue. Benvenuto, having left his knife at home, picked up a handful of filth from the gutter, and in his haste he overlooked, as one will, a sharp stone in the center of the mud-clot, which stone, when the mud was applied to the notary, knocked him senseless. Benvenuto dusted off his hands and went home, with an easy conscience, having done only what one must.

FINDS VIRGINIA AT LAST

But a friend dropped in to say that the notary was dead, and the notary's friend had objected to the murder. Benvenuto ran for his life, and didn't stop running until he came to Naples.

And there, at the first inn, was Virginia waiting for him. Her mother, believing her safe, had gone to visit an aunt, twenty leagues away, and wouldn't be back for a week.

They should have lived happily ever after. The notary wasn't dead, only stunned, and the Pope sent word to come back and bring Virginia along and finish the portrait.

But the will of Heaven, though inexorable, is surprising. In the end Virginia couldn't get on with him. Neither could the Pope.

MISS KENNEDY SECRET BRIDE

(By Universal Service)

New York, Aug. 27—Madge Kennedy, who many times has played the roles of young brides on stage and screen, became a bride in real life on August 13, it was revealed here.

She is now the wife of William B. Hanley, Jr., well known actor and radio artist.

Charles L. Wagner, theatrical representative for Miss Kennedy, said the couple were married in Kingman, Arizona, and left immediately for New York, where they will reside.

Miss Kennedy had been a widow for seven years. Her first husband, Harold Bolster, wealthy broker, died in Los Angeles, August 2, 1927.

Bolster was stricken while on a business trip in South America and was taken to Los Angeles for treatment.

Miss Kennedy, who was appearing in a play in San Francisco, chartered a plane and flew to San Francisco, but arrived an hour after Bolster died. She returned the same evening to San Francisco to resume her part in the play.

Under the terms of Bolster's will, Miss Kennedy inherited more than $500,000.

STUDENT FLIER CUT IN CRASH

Raymond Vittum 28, of Waltham, received only minor cuts and bruises when his plane, while rounding the pylon at the west end of the Metropolitan Airport, Norwood, crashed at an altitude of 25 feet.

Vittum, a student pilot, was the last of 10 entrants in a student fliers' precision landing contest. Unable to gain altitude the plane which he was flying went into a nose dive and crashed 25-feet to the ground, snapping off both wings and the propellor and smashing the under-carriage.

Three Accused of South End Holdup

Three men were arrested early this morning on a charge of attempted larceny during a holdup from John Fisher, of Rosemont avenue, Waltham, at Washington and Dover streets, South End.

The men arrested are: John Barry, 30, of Warrenton street, Joseph Ryan, of Sharon street, and James Maginn, 43, of Goldsmith park, Roxbury.

WOMAN FOUND SLAIN IN BRUSH

By Universal Service

San Francisco, Aug. 27 — The nude body of a woman was found partially hidden in the brush 300 feet from the Skyline boulevard near Redwood Park Inn.

The gruesome discovery was made by Ed. Martin who was walking through the brushy district.

Deputy sheriffs were unable at first to determine whether the body was that of a man or a woman as it was badly decomposed.

Age of the woman, however, was still a mystery. Officers hoped to effect an identification through gold fillings in her teeth.

Sheriff's deputies who investigated said it would have been impossible to toss the body from an automobile on the road. Someone, the officers declared, must have carried it to the brushy area below the road.

Aimee McPherson Writes New Opera

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 27 (US)—Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton solved the mystery of her "incognito" vacation here. The Los Angeles evangelist disclosed she is writing an opera, "The Rich Man and Lazarus." Collaborating with her is Charles Walkem, musical director of Angelus Temple.

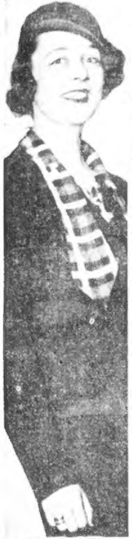
'beacon hill'

By Betty Alden

SUCCESS IS A WORD WHICH generally has to be used with certain qualifications, but we do not think any are necessary so far as the first show of the North Shore Kennel Club are concerned .



PEGGY OTIS

There were many classes which had not been seen in this country for many years . . . the judging was speeded up all along the line . . . the various classes were many and varied and the general public were instructed as to the type and qualities of breeds well known to this country as well as of those more rarely seen.

It was good to see the interest of the children in the different breeds . . . there was close competition among the younger exhibitors and a fine sporting spirit. Our impression of the show as a whole was that the coming generation will take a greater interest in dogs and horses than ever their parents did . . . they are being tutored along these lines and we can see a vast improvement in their decorum and character.

Azure skies flecked with fleecy clouds and warm sunlight brightened the day . . . under huge white tents the kennels were given plenty of room and air . . . the old polo field of the Myopia Hunt Club took on the appearance of a county fair . . . the exhibitors, friends and spectators seemed a bit more democratic than they have for a number of years but they are still a stiff-necked crowd hiding their inferiority complexes under a coat of snobbery. They have yet to learn the wisdom of living and letting live . . .

We must mention the most notable Peer of the Dog Realm who proved the sensation which was predicted . . . Prince Alexander V. Rodelheim, owned by Mrs. Justin W. Griess . . . a large, snowy-white French poodle acquired abroad this past summer at a fabulous price in the dog world. Mr. and Mrs. Griess were largely responsible for the success of the dog show . . . hailing from the West a few years ago, they have taken up residence on the North Shore, a great addition to the North Shore colony. We had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Griess at "Barby" Gage's luncheon and found her as attractive as we had anticipated . . . she was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Richard K. Sears, and looked very summery in white crepe with large white hat . . . it was the day for it.

Mrs. Sortwell in Gown of Pale Grey

ANOTHER ERNEST DEVOTEE of Prince Dog is Mrs. Gilbert Steward . . . she handled her daschunds with skill and won a few firsts. In dusty pink crepe she was so absorbed in her little favorites she could not stand for a picture . . . we noted her mother, Mrs. Charles F. Ayer, chatting at the ringside in a flowered batiste and broad-brimmed hat, very pretty as always.

As usual, when a few of the North Shore elite turn out, the others show up, also . . . we noted all the old residents in the very large crowd, both morning and afternoon. The "Pete" Sortwells were there en famille, Mrs. Sortwell in the becoming pale grey . . . her sweet-smiling daughter, Frances, whose debut will take place next year, was in a summer cotton. There were many of the young group, among them Dorothy West, whose father, George S. West, was an important greyhound exhibitor . . . Phyllis Forbes, Isabel Lawrence, Katherine Winthrop and Madelaine Phillips . . .

Mrs. Frederick Vaughan and her small son were proudly displaying a first prize for Junior's Great Dane, an event in the life of a small boy. Mrs. George Vaughan was having a cheery time with her two house guests, Mr. "Pat" Smyth and Mr. G. Nelson Vance, two out-of-town interested spectators.

Luncheon at the Gage Home

ACROSS THE FIELDS to West Hill we sauntered for luncheon with those three grand musketeers of fun and frolic, Isabella Cammann, Elizabeth Knevils and "Barby" Gage . . . a gay, chattering crowd were already overflowing the old-fashioned house and verandas, even into the gardens ablaze of light and color with blossoms of every hue running riot over ground and walls . . . everyone was discussing the perfectly GRAND party given by the Griesses at the Myopia Club on Friday night before and unto the golden dawn . . . after 20 years Rip Van Winkle seems to have come to life and Sleepy Hollow has waked up! Let the revels continue . . .

We met the attractive Mrs. Richard Hubbard in yellow sports frock and her mother and father, the John Moultons, were glimpsed on the terrace . . . dark-eyed Mrs. Howland Seabury was charming in orange knitted frock chatting with Mrs. Joseph Hoyt in the popular flowered batiste . . .

Many did not leave the arena for lunch. We scurried back to see many still in their places waiting for the decision of the many judges . . . Mrs. Paul Moore in grey checked gingham with touch of red was completely absorbed . . . her daughter, Miss Pauline, was still dodging cameras, why, Heaven only knows! She always takes a good snap!

Girlish in White Tennis Dress

MRS. RICHARD STOREY was girlish in white tennis dress, hatless, her bright hair flying in the breeze . . . Mrs. John Amory (nee Buttrick) was assisting at the score boards . . . Mr. and Mrs. George Timmins had journeyed down from Groton, Mrs. Timmins very attractive in blue crepe . . . Miss Gertrude Sands motored over from Marblehead . . . Peggy Otis in brown sweater and yellow skirt was squired by a new beau, she has so many . . . Mrs. Colyar P. Dodson was watching the sporting classes with interest although her champion was not entered . . .

Mrs. Robert B. Choate in garnet red knitted sports dress with striped sweater was chic . . . Mrs. Harry P. McKean lounged at the ropes in yellow and white spectator sports . . . with her daughter, Mrs. Charles S. Bird, walked about the kennels . . . Mrs. W. F. A. Stride was deeply interested as her husband, the Reverend Stride's church will benefit from the proceeds of this first Dog Show . . . there will be many more it is predicted, such is Success!

Mrs. Richard Hubbard

Jordan of Chestnut Hill. The members of the bridal party and a few intimate friends will be guests at the dinner, on the evening of September 3.

The bride's mother will entertain the bridesmaids at luncheon also the day before the wedding. Miss Mary Montgomery, Miss Jordan's cousin, will attend her as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Mrs. Richard H. Overholt, Miss Eleanor Ritchie, Miss Jane Loomis, and Miss Lucia Allyn.

The ceremony will be performed in St. Lawrence's Church, in Chestnut Hill, at 3:30 on September 4, and will be attended only by the immediate families of the bridal couple. A larger reception will follow in the garden of the bride's mother, on Woodland road, Chestnut Hill.

Following a wedding journey the bridal couple will make their home at 306 The Riverway, Boston.

Business Men Will Stage Tax Protest

New York, Aug. 27 (US)—The city's organized business groups are prepared to storm City Hall today in protest against the proposed tax of one-half of one per cent on gross business incomes.

Opponents of the bill, led by Grover A. Whalen, former police commissioner, are reported ready to propose a general sales tax as an alternative measure to raise funds for unemployment relief.

PROUD OWNERS OF DOGDOM'S ACES AT NORTH SHORE SHOW

MRS. JUSTIN W. GREISS

MISS KATHERINE WINTHROP

Fitzpatrick Engagements are Announced

Betty Fitzpatrick to Become Bride of Robert O'Neill

YOUNG SMART SETTERS will be interested in two announcements in the same family one of which definitely settles the perplexing question as to who would be the future bride of popular "Jack" Merrick.

The engagement of Miss Evelyn Marie Fitzpatrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Fitzpatrick of Brookline and Beach Bluffs, to John Gregory Merrick of Dorchester was announced by her parents on Saturday. Mr. Merrick is the son of Mrs. Robert M. Merrick and the late Dr. Merrick.

Miss Fitzpatrick finished her studies at Eden Hall, Philadelphia, after which she spent a year at the Sacre Coeur school in Brussels and a year at the Erskine school in Boston. She is a debutante of 1930-1931. Mr. Merrick is a graduate of Boston College, class of 1930.

HOW MUCH IS A CHAT WORTH?

A man's answer to this question is apt to be in terms of dollars and cents. A telephone call profits him in buying or selling. Or it saves time, and time has a money equivalent.

But aren't there other values? To hearts hungry for companionship of the spirit, can the satisfaction derived from a telephone toll call be expressed in dollars and cents? Who can appraise a whispered caress, a word of comfort or cheer, or a child's laugh?

You [especially if in a hurry to use the telephone] may deem it of no earthly importance that the ribboned bonnet Grandma sent Baby exactly matches Baby's coat; or that it looks as if Baby's first tooth is about to come through.

You'll agree, probably, that these topics seemed important to those who were talking about them. And they were. Nothing could exceed them in heart interest, unless Baby had just talked, or — marvel of marvels — had walked. That would have been something to telephone home about!

The significant fact is not what they say, but that they may say it; that, although separated by scores or hundreds or thousands of miles, they may bring themselves so closely together as to be able to whisper in each other's ears. There's comfort in the mere thought.

Think of someone near and dear. Bid the operator connect you, and the telephone brings you not merely words, but tones, inflections — a personality. And with equal vividness you can in turn reflect your own personality.

Who can measure with a slide rule the resulting gratification, or weigh in money the pleasure it gives and brings? For a toll call has a double value: its pleasure is shared by the one who receives as well as by the one who sends.

As the evening hours are best adapted to such social toll calls, it may be informing to suggest typical rates. Those quoted below are for a three-minute call, by number, from

PARAMOUNT TO FILM "THE GLASS KEY" -:- SOUTH SEA COMEDY AT KEITH'S

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

Tonight, in New York, the new theatrical season is on again. The new theatrical season does not become "on again" until a new and original production under professional sponsorship comes to a Broadway theater. Well, a new, original, and in this case, lavish production opens at the Winter Garden tonight and it is none other than Boston's recent friend "Life Begins at 8:40."

An undertone of stark tragedy connected with this opening night impresses this chronicler as a chilling proof of the saw: "the show must go on." One of the minor principals who played in Boston the past week is dead of a dread disease and her sister and acting-mate is in serious condition. Many of the victims' mates may have been subjected to the same infection. New York's ermines and toppers will view tonight's premiere, and the show will go off probably without a hitch. But there will be a cast of principals and chorus laughing only while in view of the audience.

Thelma White

Two other shows complete the week's calendar of openings. "Saluta," a satirical musical comedy, with Will Morrissey as the moving spirit, and with Milton Berle and Thelma White as the chief performers, will open at the Imperial Theater tomorrow night. On Wednesday, "Kill That Story," a comedy about newspaper advertising men on convention, produced by George Abbott and Phil Dunning, and written by Mr. Dunning and Harry Madden, rings up the curtain at the Booth Theater. James Bell and Emily Lowry are in the cast.

The Boston Rialto will be dark. "Life Begins at 8:40" left town to capacity business last Wednesday night. The show could have remained profitably to many more days of business, but the Messrs. Shubert and John Murray Anderson were concerned about fitting its scenic intricacies to the stage of the Winter Garden, and the sure profits were ignored for the betterment of the New York showing.

George Raft Will Be Starred in Detective Picture; Studios Seek Child Actors

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 27—Paramount is going to have its own little Dashiell Hammett movie. Why not? Months ago "The Glass Key" was purchased and discussed for productioon. Some way these little conferences never seemed to lead anywhere. None of the Para producers was interested. Ah my children, that was before "The Thin Man" era. Now all of the movie makers would enjoy a chance to try to produce another such box office smash hit.

Louella O. Parsons

E. Lloyd Sheldon, who just got back from Europe, hastened to get busy on "The Glass Key" as his next picture. And George Raft, who was about the only Paramount leading man never mentioned as "Glass Key" prospect, will be given the chance to do a William Powell. Let's hope George has as much clever dialogue and as deft direction as Bill had in "The Thin Man."

Talk about being between the devil and the deep blue sea. That is Herbert Marshall's dilemma. Gilbert Miller is eagerly paging him for a play in New York. In fact, Bart was supposed to return East for the Miller engagement, it's sort of an arrangement made long ago. Now along come all these movie offers, dozens of them, and since Bart likes Hollywood, well, what's a gent going to do? If he stays here he will play opposite Margaret Sullavan in "The Good Fairy" for Universal, but if he doesn't well, he is giving up a lot of swell parts.

Helen Morgan

What is the future of Helen Morgan in motion pictures? A few months ago I wouldn't have bet a nickel on her as a movie prospect. Then she made "You Belong To Me" and all the old Morgan charm and verve were there. Producers who had been wary of signing the piano - sitting songstress began looking at her with a new interest. Warner's at the moment, is negotiating with her to play opposite Rudy Vallee in "Sweet Music." That is the first Vallee opera and it's authored by Monsieur Jerry Wald.

Chatter in Hollywood

Oh me, oh my! The Sari Maritza-Sam Katz romance is again hotter than pepper. In fact, a little bird whispered in my ear that Sam and Sari, after all these months, are going to get married very soon. We printed their matrimonial intentions a year ago and then their romance seemed to cool. Now it has flared up again, and is extremely serious at least such is our information from New York.

Studio Jottings

When Clarence Brown and the lovely Alice Joyce Brown sail on the Aquitania for a trip in Europe they won't have to worry about expenses. Clarence is all signed up on a three years' Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract without so much as an option to cause him uneasiness. Gavin Gordon checked in at Warners. He's set for an important role in "Border Town" opposite Paul Muni. You'd be surprised at the number of old last year's films that are being revamped for the talkies. "Green Stockings," a Dorothy MacKaill flicker, is being entirely rewritten and restored as a possible vehicle for Barbara Stanwyck. Dudley Digges is walking around the Warners lot. He has a job there in "I Am a Thief," a coming Ricardo Cortez-Mary Astor vehicle.

Barbara Stanwyck

A Line or Two

A certain actress is acting like the well known ostrich. She claims the advances are all on the side of a certain New Yorker. Maybe this writer is blind and deaf and dumb, but if she isn't then her eyes didn't deceive her when she saw them together and heard the actress' protestations of admiration. The devotion of Edmund Goulding to his invalid wife wins this column's admiration critically and fatally ill, Marjorie expressed a wish that she might once more look at the Pacific ocean. Eddie hired an ambulance and drove with her down to Santa Monica. This seems to be a golden day for all of our press agent friends. Here comes Paula Gould, whom I have known longer than I am willing to admit, telling me that she has sold her first novel, "Love Is Madness." The Phillip Rose Company is publishing Paula's yarn and two film companies, having read the galley proof, have put in a bid.

Shirley Temple certainly started something in dear old Hollywood. All the studios are now trying to get another child with the box office appeal of this young lady. Paramount has David Holt and now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed Mickey Rooney on a two-year contract. Young Rooney sounds like a child prodigy. He speaks four languages, plays the piano and remembers lines. He has been in seven pictures in the last four played in 45 featured pictures in the last year and a half. So you cannot really call him a discovery.

Snapshots of Hollywood

JOAN BENNETT and GENE MARKEY car-less; the old debbil sea at Malibu washed right up to their garage so they were unable to get to it; the DAVID BUTLERS also suffers from the storm; MRS. JESSIE GODDARD, mother of the beautious PAULETTE, forced to move out of her Malibu home; PAULETTE and JOSEPH SCHENCK consoling each other; CHARLIE CHAPLIN tied up on a business engagement and JOE admittedly missing his fiancee, MERLE OBERON; VIRGINIA PINE and GEORGE RAFT never so much in love as at this time; they were glimpsed holding hands right out in front of everyone at Levy's tavern; JEAN HARLOW hostess at a cocktail party in honor of her house guest, HELEN WILSON; MAX BAER given the great beeg knockout dinner by LEO MORRISON; EDDIE CANTOR, funniest master of ceremonies in captivity, toast-master at the dinner; LEO CARILLO referee; ladies as well as gents invited; ANNA MAY WONG meeting the press at a cocktail party in her dressing room; JOE E. BROWN off for Santa Barbara to appear as guest of honor at the fiesta on invitation of the mayor. That's all today. See you tommorrow!

May Robson and Franchot Tone are mother and son in "Straight Is the Way" at Loew's Orpheum.

Comedy Now at Cohasset

As the final offering of the summer season, Alexander Dean will present the South Shore Players this evening in "Goodbye Again" at the Cohasset town hall.

This merry comedy by George Haight and Allan Scott, which enjoyed great popularity both on Broadway and during its brief Boston engagement, concerns Kenneth Bixby, a women's club lecturer and his efforts to escape the unwelcome attentions of a small town matron who claims to have been a sweetheart of his school days.

Humphrey Bogart will have the role of the harrassed Bixby, Joan Kenyon, the secretary with whom he is in love, and Shirley Booth, the simpering lady from the past.

Others in the cast are Broderick Crawford, Aldrich Bowker, Mary Howes, Ben Hoagland, James Furness and David Barber.

At Tremont

"Sorrell and Son," with H. B. Warner and Hugh William, and "Private Scandal," featuring Mary Brian and Phillips Holmes provide the screen fare on today's new bill at the Tremont Theater.

Mary Boland's Work Superb in Comedy

By Joyce Dana

The mythical island of Malakamokalu, where there's nothing to do but make love, provides the Utopian setting for "Down to Their Last Yacht," which brings Mary Boland, Polly Moran and a lot of other fun-makers to the screen at the Keith-Memorial.

Filled with tuneful melodies, dark-skinned maidens and exceedingly lavish sets and costumes, "Down to Their Last Yacht," while it stretches a few points to be fast and funny, is certainly novel, to the point of fantasy.

Mary Boland

In a topsy-turvy world, the socially registered Colt-Strattons find themselves reduced to the extreme of working for a living, cycling back to their last yacht for their living quarters. Up the gang-plank barges Polly Moran with Ned Sparks and a scheme to charter the yacht for a south seas cruise, with the newly rich as passengers and the impoverished aristocracy as their servants.

The yacht and the captain pick Malakamokalu, pearl of the Pacific, on which to strand the party. There the natives disport in Park Avenue gowns, the Manhattanites in garlands and beads, while the amorous and balmy Queen appropriates the diamond bracelets and the handsomest gentlemen and plays a lot of amusing pranks, topping her fun with a new high by blowing up the yacht.

With this rough idea of the riot, you can picture Mary Boland as the delightfully demented lady monarch, a part that allows her to be as regally ridiculous as her own grand sense of comedy could imagine. It's a performance that completely outdistances Polly Moran, who makes a lot of noise and little impression, comic or otherwise.

Irene Franklin as the acquisitive Mrs. Gilhooley demonstrates how well she knows her way around in comedies with music, and Ned Sparks is glum and impassive as the captain. What romance there is has been entrusted to Sidney Fox and Sidney Blackmer, with Sterling Holloway and his saxophone injecting a few more laughs.

The music is excellent popular material, including "Tiny Little Finger On Your Hand," and "There's Nothing Else To Do," which you've probably been whistling for weeks. The voices, either in solo or in the elaborate South Sea Bolero chorus, are exceptionally good.

Given in Marriage

—By Adele Garrison—

Avis Arlen, invited to be a bridesmaid, insists upon wearing a gown of color suitable to her, even if the color will clash with the wedding decorations.

CHAPTER 125

I BRACED myself for a contest of wills as Avis Arlen voiced her preference for wearing a Paris gown of her own at Mary's wedding, instead of the one to match Carolyn's which we had planned for the two bridesmaids.

I did not minimize the struggle before me. Still fresh in my memory was the day when I had been compelled to speak to Avis Arlen in an insulting manner that I had never used to a human being before her; yet it had been the only way to prevent her intrusion, unasked, upon a house party of Helena Brixton's. I had conquered by sheer brutal rudeness at last, and I had no scruples now as to the weapons I should use if she refused to be amenable to ordinary tactics.

"Let me set your mind at rest upon one point, Avis," making my voice as cordial as possible. "Neither you nor Carolyn will be put to one cent of expense for the new gowns. Mr. Graham and myself are buying all the gowns, Mary's and Marion's as well as yours and Carolyn's."

REFUSES "CHARITY"

"How terribly sweet and generous of you!" she gurgled. "But I never could permit you to do that for me. It's too much like charity."

My fingers tightened involuntarily on the telephone, as I would have liked to tighten them on her arm. Her reason was so specious, so utterly ridiculous from any standpoint.

"What utter nonsense!" I said. "I did not know anyone could be so utterly silly."

"I suppose it does sound that way to you," she said sweetly, "but I just can't help it. I've always been so proud! I just can't take charity."

I longed to reach across the wires that separated us and slap from her face the mendacious smirk which I knew was on it. Instead, I controlled my voice and spoke calmly, though icily.

"Do you mean to imply, Avis, that Marion and Carolyn are subjects of charity? Their people are perfectly able to buy them a dozen gowns such as these will be, but they are not making us uncomfortable by refusing us the privilege of providing everything for our niece's wedding."

"Oh, no; I didn't mean that at all!" she said, in startled tones, and I seized the opportunity to clinch my point.

"Then please do not let me hear anything more upon that point," I said, using the tone of voice used to the recreant pupils of my teaching days. "It is not only silly, but really almost an insult to all of us; and I know you could not mean it so because you pride yourself on never being rude."

"Oh, dear Mrs. Graham!" her voice was as tremulous as though she were weeping. "Please don't say that. I wouldn't be rude to you for anything. But would you think me very presumptuous if I asked you whether you had yet selected the color of Carolyn's gown and mine?"

DASHING COLORS

"Yes, we have." I gave my voice a touch of finality.

"Oh, I do hope it's pale green or silver. Do tell me it's one of those colors, dear Mrs. Graham."

"I'm sorry, Avis, but it's neither of those colors. I don't think I can explain over the telephone to you just what it is, only that it will shade in with the bronzey yellow roses with pink tips that you all are going to carry. Mrs. Brixton is to select the material, and she is a sartorial artist. Her taste is impeccable. I am sure you will like the finished result."

"But don't you think, dear Mrs. Graham—this is a terrible thing to say, but a girl must protect herself. I am sure Mrs. Brixton doesn't like me, and I am afraid unconsciously she will be thinking of Carolyn's coloring instead of mine. Don't you think it would be the most natural thing in the world for her, you know? Can't I persuade you to let me wear my green and silver dress? It would tone in beautifully with those other colors, and I am sure Uncle Phil would wish me to look as well as the others."

MADGE'S ULTIMATUM

I wondered if there were a covert threat in her last words. Was she saying in effect: "If you don't do as I wish, I will appeal to Mr. Veritzen to make things unpleasant for everybody"? The idea roused every bit of fighting spirit I possessed, but I made my voice as icy as my blood was hot.

"I am sure he also would wish you to conform to the wishes of your hostess," I told her. "Now, Avis, I am sorry, but I am very busy this morning, and I have no more time to waste. If you wish to accept the invitation to be a bridesmaid, given you because Mr. Veritzen asked for it, and entailing much added work in our wedding plans, you will meet Mrs. Brixton this morning and accede to her plans in every detail, making not a single suggestion.

"If you cannot do this, I must withdraw the invitation, much as I hate to displease Mr. Veritzen. But of course I shall have to explain that it was impossible for us to change the entire color scheme of the wedding to accommodate an extra bridesmaid."

Mild Weather Fur Trimmed Coats

By Prunella Wood

There will be plenty of bright days coming along soon when a medium weight coat of definite winter styling will be just what the weather doctor ordered. The woman who does not intend to spend a whole slice of her budget on such an inbetween coat—despite the fact that for six months these same mild days will be possible gets a break this year. The new models are tempered to the shorn lamb (American broadtail, they call it) and the most pernickety person could not say they look commonplace and undistinguished.

The proper length for these coats is about 11 inches from the floor, just long enough to cover the approved length in casual daytime frocks, which is 12 inches from the floor. Much depends on the ultimate chic of the coats if this point is kept in mind. They are complete in themselves and a rim of contrasting material below them will bring on a Tillie-off-the-barge expression. Having them too long is just as mistaken in another way.

The new models don't go in for patches of fur here and there. A rather dramatic collar, rippled as to revers upstanding at the back, is deemed sufficient for some. When a flat fur is used it may appear on collar and cuffs, but in such a restrained manner that the total effect is more subtle than dashing. When a model has a double dose of showy swank, the second hit is usually in a muff, which is really a shopping bag with a fur front and two snug little pockets just big enough to hold the fingers.

Dark green, browns that are more on the beige than the chocolate side, gray and plenty of black seem to be the larger color scheme. Fitch, always beautiful but not usually so well styled, is a wow on many a coat priced well under the seventy-five dollars of your budget.

The snug turban or the floppy huge beret that is flattened in back are practical with high-reaching fur collars.

First Trick Choice Between Two Perilous Plays

By Josephine Culbertson

A man has to be a pretty good bridge player to break a rule—much better, for example, than he was when he first learned the rule; for when he has reached the degree of skill at which he knows when to disregard the rule, he has come to understand it thoroughly and thus be capable of relying on his own analysis rather than on any arbitrary instructions which have been given him.

A case is shown below in which a well-known expert found himself forced, on the first trick, to choose between two possible dangerous plays. One would cause him to sacrifice his only card of entry in his best suit, thus blocking it. The other would cause him to risk the loss of a trick, possibly the setting trick, if he failed to use an honor to promote cards in his partner's hand.

East-West vulnerable.

West	North	East
	♠A832 ♡10 ♢K52 ♣Q10873
♠J64 ♡AJ97 ♢9873 ♣52	North West East South	♠K75 ♡Q6532 ♢104 ♣A96
	♠Q109 ♡K84 ♢AQJ6 ♣KJ4

South bid a diamond, North two clubs, South two notrump and three notrump, with East and West always passing. South's rebid at two notrump was based upon his strong support for the club suit, and upon his stoppers in the two unbid suits, which made it appear that there should be at worst a diamond finesse to make the contract.

West opened the heart 7, the fourth best of his strongest suit. Dummy's singleton ten was played and at this point East's problem confronted him. By using the Rule of Eleven he was able to determine that South had exactly two hearts higher than the seven. If these were the only hearts South held, East should surely play the Queen, lest with Ace-Jack, Ace-nine or Ace-eight South be allowed to win two tricks when only deserving one.

There could be no danger of blocking the suit in this case, since West would also hold five hearts. But if South held the missing heart 4, the only card in that suit East held which would top West's lowest heart was the Queen, and if this card were given up on the first round it was unlikely that the fifth heart could ever be used because East's only sure entry—the Ace of clubs—would be driven out immediately.

By carefully considering the cards which must make up South's hand to justify his bidding, East determined his course. South at best had the Queen-Jack of spades. If he had only had two hearts (unless they were the Ace-King, in which case East's play made no difference) South's stoppers in two suits were weak, so that he could not have bid two notrump. East therefore thought it more likely that West had four hearts than five, in which case defeat of the contract depended upon West's having an outside entry, which seemed extremely improbable, or the Ace-Jack of hearts. Thus the best gamble seemed to be that South had only the heart King and West the Ace. East therefore ducked the ten of hearts, being careful to play his six as an encouraging card. The Dummy's ten held the trick and South led clubs until East won with the Ace.

Now East led the heart 3, and South ducked, hoping that West would not continue the suit. But East's echo had made it obvious to West that for some reason East was resorting to extraordinary measures, and it was West's duty to cooperate. After winning this trick with the heart nine West laid down the Ace and South's King dropped. West followed with the Jack which East overtook with the Queen and cashed the five of hearts for the setting trick.

Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your questions to Josephine Culbertson, in care of this newspaper.

Canning Standards Are High, Consumer Expert Finds

ELIZABETH FRAZER, representing consumers, has just completed for Good Housekeeping an investigation of the canning industry. She reports in September Good Housekeeping that she found standards of production high because the canners themselves voluntarily regulated their industry before the NRA took hold. They created a minimum standard of wholesomeness below which no manufacturer may go with proclaiming it on his label. This standard was made legal in 1930 by the McNary-Mapes amendment to the Pure Food and Drugs Act. She says women who buy guaranteed brands may be assured of pure, honest products.

Federal inspectors whom she interviewed told her: "The main body of food manufacturers are honest; they are playing the game, getting out good products, cooperating with us. It is the small minority of chiselers, fly-by-nights who manufacture inferior food that keep us awake at night."

"It is important to note," she says, "that in all these processes there are no secret formulae, no artificial preservatives. The whole success lies in the scientific method of approach; good raw materials, canneries located close to the source of supply, thorough inspection, daily sterilization of all equipment, and constant laboratory control. All these factors work for the protection of the consumer."

In answer to queries as to how housewives can protect themselves from the minor group of "chiselers" Miss Frazer says: "The answer is, buy guaranteed, identified brands in which the quality of the food is safeguarded every step of the way from raw materials in orchard and and field to the finished product in the can.

"The woman who has taken from a shelf a can of quality food reaches for a can opener. The vast processional of scientists, horticultural experts, farmers and manufacturers who have labored to make a good product pass in shadowy file. Have you caught a glimpse of their tremendous efforts — of the research, the laboratory control, the integrity, the pride of honest achievement which have gone into the can—and enjoy what it offers you!"

When Banana Is Classed as Vegetable

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast over Station WAAB.

DO YOU WONDER how new recipes and combinations are created? Some are stumbled upon by accident and others are carefully worked out by kitchen scientists who spend all their time inventing these new ideas. Here are a few which have recently come to us that you will want to try immediately.

In a beige and blue kitchen in New York harbor, down where the banana boats come in, the tropical fruit was used to make a brand new entree. When the banana is partially ripe-yellow but with a green tip—it is a a different delicious flavor and vegetable; cooked as such it has is thoroughly digestible, as you will note when you try this new recipe:

BANANA AU GRATIN

¼ cup grated American cheese
1 tbsp. dry bread or cracker crumbs
2 tbsps. lemon juice
6 bananas, cut in halves
¼ tsp. salt

Roll bananas in lemon juice, then in grated cheese, bread crumbs and salt which have been mixed together. Place in well-greased baking dish and bake for 15 to 20 minutes in a hot oven (400 deg. F.) or until brown on top. Serve hot as a vegetable. Makes 12 servings or two helpings apiece for six.

And from Chicago comes the recipe for a delicious new cake which was born because the grocery boy had forgotten to bring the chocolate for a Silhouette Cake. He did remember, however, to bring a can of fresh peanut butter, and inspired this "Peanut Butter Goop Cake." Bake your favorite cake in two layers and put together with Seven Minute Frosting.

SEVEN MINUTE FROSTING

2 unbeaten egg whites
1¾ cups sugar
6 tbsps. cold water

Place all ingredients in top part of double boiler. Cook, beating constantly, until mixture stands in peaks. (About 7 minutes.) Beat and spread on cake. When cool add peanut butter swirl:

1-3 cup sugar
1-3 cup water
¼ cup peanut butter

Boil sugar and water 5 minutes. Stir into peanut butter. When smooth and thickened swirl on cake.

FOR ELUSIVE EVENING GLORY

(POSED BY LILLIAN HARVEY)

Ocean Fare Is Paid by Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me who should pay the passage if the young man is a foreigner and lives in Europe and is unable to come to America to get his bride, and so they have to be married at his home? He knows that she is not a girl of means. S.

This is such an unusual circumstance that, in the last analysis, it is the couple who must decide it. But I strongly recommend to the bride-to-be that, even if it is a severe hardship in her budgeting, she should arrange to pay her own passage . . . just as she would pay the expenses for her wedding.

Vinegar Aids Sun-Tan

Question: I have heard that vinegar and olive oil will give the body an even coat of tan. What is the procedure?

J. E. R., Watertown

Answer: The procedure is to sponge the body with vinegar, not too strong. Pat dry, then massage the body with olive oil, letting the body absorb the oil—as much of it as possible. You can then leave it on, any excess oil I mean, or remove with tissues and dust with talcum.

Supreme Touch to Dazzling Toilette

By Juliet Shelby

OF COURSE you want to be a dazzling, intriguing creature in your new fall evening gown! You want to give Mr. Best Beau a lasting memory of you as you were in the autumn of 1934—exquisitely gowned, immaculately groomed and youthfully handsome! You want him to think about you, after he leaves you, and wonder what made you so desirable on that particular night. I know you do—and I'll tell you how to do it.

Spend hours, if necessary, on your grooming before you slip into that lovely gown. Dress up to it. See that your body is thoroughly cleansed, your skin soft and free of ugly hair. Have your toenails as jewel-like as your fingernails. Your teeth must sparkle and your hair must be a halo of feminine loveliness.

Make up carefully. With subtle shading, make your eyes deeper and more mysterious. Draw a fascinating lipline, and be sure your face, neck, shoulders and back are of even skin-tone. Creams and powders will take care of that.

And for the final touch to this perfect grooming, spray your skin, your hair and the hem of your gown with a perfume that is compelling in its fragance, but evasive. A perfume not too sweet, not too heavy.

There is one such blend, originally inspired by one of the most fascinating women of the old Russian royalty. It was created specially for her, and today is favored by her. For this perfume whispers of her rare personality—distinctly charming, intriguing, mysterious! As she kept many admirers guessing, so does this perfume keep people sniffing, wondering.

It is moderately priced in comparison with other fine perfumes. You can get a dram for a dollar and that is an excellent way to get acquainted with it. A bottle of this intriguing scent is slightly higher, of course. If I haven't lured you sufficiently, let me add that the bottle itself is distinguished enough to warrant the authenticity of the intriguing liquid it holds! You'll adore it!

You may learn the name of this perfume and where it is sold by phoning Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000, or by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

WORLD GASPS---WHAT NEXT---WITH HITLER IN FULL POWER

MYSTERY MAN OF CENTURY NOW HOLDS FATE OF EUROPE

The Boston Evening American today concludes its series of articles on Hitler, the human question mark of Europe. Most talked of man in the world today, the dictator of Germany holds the key to the problem of war or peace in Europe.

CHAPTER 13

Hitler!
The world watches him!
What will he do next?

Success has ruined many men. Disaster made Hitler. Phoenix-like, he rose from the ashes of his prison life to greater glories, greater achievements than he had ever dreamed were possible.

The first years were bitter. After his release. He knew it his first day of freedom. In the evening of that day Hitler went to the home of Ernst (Hanfy) Hanfstaengl, who had secreted him before his arrest. They greeted. Then Hitler said:

"Hanfstaengl. Play for me. Play Wagner. He understood!"

Hanfstaengl played Wagner. Hitler listened, said not a word, went out the door. That love of militant, masterful music, always and still his, had been satisfied. And he was stronger and better prepared for the struggle ahead.

That struggle to recoup his lost party went on unceasingly from 1925 until 1928. For their forces were scattered. But the personality, oratory and capacity for work of Hitler finally knit them together again.

By 1927 his work had succeeded so well that the Nazi party was now recognized. The ban against him had been removed in Prussia and he was now speaking everywhere within the nation.

Surprise Nation Winning 12 Seats

In 1928, the Nazis were given a place on the national ballots at the elections and surprised everyone by winning 12 seats in the Reichstag. That is, surprised everybody but Hitler, himself. He had predicted they would win ten.

In 1930, the 12 seats had given such a good account of themselves, as viewed through the eyes of the German populace, that the elections gave Hitler's brown shirted followers 107 seats in the Reichstag.

That astounded the world. Whereas formerly most of the comment regarding this man of mystery had been confined to Germany, now it skipped the borders and appeared in the press of England, France and America. Correspondents for foreign papers with offices in Berlin began to seek him out. Hitler was now a world figure.

Each of the 107 representatives sent to the Reichstag swore personal allegiance to Hitler. He made them do it. Just as he recently forced every man in the Reichwehr to swear personal allegiance to him.

Meantime, Hindenburg had been made President of Germany. And in 1932 Hitler opposed him for the office. Though defeated, he polled 13,000,000 votes. That established him as a national politician, which was attested when the then Chancellor, Heinrich Bruening, began to ask his opinion upon public questions.

One of them was whether or not the Hindenburg term of office should be extended. Hitler disapproved of it. He probably reasoned he would beat the old soldier at the next election. A viewpoint that was justified when, on July 31, 1932, the Hitler party won 230 seats in the Reichstag.

Backed by this strength, Hitler at once began a campaign for more power. The yearning within him for greater influence was unquenchable. With 230 seats in the Reichstag, he could let it have full sway.

Finally Named to Chancellor Post

He called to see Hindenburg. And first told him what he wanted then demanded the chancellorship of Germany. Long they discussed the situation but the old soldier refused the post to him. Possibly the warrior-statesman believed that the Nazi power was then at its peak and would fade out. In which there would have been good logic for at the November elections of 1932, they had to relinquish 35 of their 230 seats.

That recession, though, did not discourage Hitler. Instead, he once more applied to Hindenburg for the post of Chancellor. And was once again refused. That was November 19, 1932.

Came 1933, in January. More elections were in the offing. The Nationalist Party, as represented by Hindenburg and the Nazis, agreed upon a coalition. As a result of which Hitler, the home town boy from Brannau, was appointed by Hindenburg to the post he so much desired. From that moment on, it was "The Chancellor" that preceded the name of Hitler whenever he was referred to.

In March of 1933, last year, Hindenburg communed with the Reichstag and Hitler was given dictatorial powers over the nation until 1937. Perhaps it was advancing years that were weighing upon Hindenburg and made him wish to transfer the burden of public affairs to younger shoulders.

Within one week after taking office, Hitler then put into execution his world famous boycott of the Jewish people. For which he has been condemned in many sections. The reaction to it was world-wide, arousing almost as much discussion in foreign countries as it did in Germany itself. In the face of criticism that sometimes amounted to abuse, Hitler maintained his position and refused to change the stand he had taken.

In October of last year Hitler, after much political sparring with foreign nations, withdrew Germany from the League of Nations and Disarmament Conference. Which was another occasion upon which he astounded the world. His action was so unusual that his policies were the dominating question before the voters at the November elections of last year. When the ballots were counted, they showed that 40,000,000 persons had gone to the polls, of whom 93 per cent had voted their endorsement of the Hitler program.

Then came the famous "purge" of last June 30 in which Hitler admits having ordered the death of Roehm von Schliecher and many others for the good of the Nazi party. Followed shortly afterward by his seizure of the presidency, as Hindenburg lay dying. An act ratified by the election of Aug. 19 last.

And now comes the question: What will Hitler do next?

Will this man, the greatest puzzle of the twentieth century, plunge Europe into war, or will he spread the gentle glories of peace over the continent.

Many persons may be found who will argue on both sides of the question.

Certain it is, that even though Hitler did include war in his plans for the future, Germany is not in a financial position to carry them out at present. For war requires money in huge quantities.

Nevertheless, the activities of those in charge of Germany's defences indicate that they do not intend to be caught napping in the event that war comes.

MAD MILLIONS -:- By Charles Grant

SYNOPSIS

Young and pretty Cathleen McCarthy, secretary to the wealthy Jasper Ingram, attracts her employer's son Seward. Realizing the difference in their social positions, Cathleen discourages Seward's attentions, but he is persistent and she finally makes an appointment with him. He presents her with an expensive bracelet which Cathleen plans to return, but the gift disappears from her dresser. Marian Alspaugh, frivolous wife of Homer Alspaugh, Ingram's confidential secretary, becomes infatuated with the Marques d'Alhues. She buys a new car to impress the Marques, and the first time she takes him out in it they have an accident and the car is destroyed. Alspaugh speculates with Ingram's money to try and meet his wife's extravagances.

Joe, Cathleen's ne'er-do-well brother, reluctantly admits pawning the bracelet for $300. Joe's new job as collector for Ingram gives him too much leisure to spend at the speakeasy frequented by Vergile Buttie, gang leader. Before he married Pia Roselli, Vergile was interested in a girl named Gemma. Gemma is now Joe's girl. Learning that Buttie's brother, Carmine, is interested in Gemma, Joe stays around to keep an eye on her. Cathleen considers the possibility of getting an advance on her salary to retrieve Seward's bracelet.

CHAPTER XVIII

Would it, she wondered now, in a flurry of rising and falling confidence, be possible to secure an advance of three hundred dollars, against ten dollars to be deducted from her salary for thirty weeks? Of course she couldn't ask Mr. Alspaugh to make the advance personally, she could ask him to speak to the office manager for her.

She was now frantically eager to work late for Alspaugh, for everything seemed to depend on his good will. "I'm always glad to stay," she assured him, when he came into the room to lay a memorandum on Ingram's desk.

"Good," he said. "The same place, eh?"

"Any place will do," she said. "I could work on just coffee and doughnuts sent in."

"Yes, but what about me? I'm going to work late, too. Don't I rate a little relaxation?"

ARLINE ON RAMPAGE

At four o'clock Ingram had not returned. Alspaugh went to the oval room with documents unexpectedly called for, and reported to Cathleen that the meeting was stormy. "But the chief's riding the waves as usual. They should know by now that they can't stand up against him."

At ten minutes past four a woman's angry voice made itself heard through two closed doors in the inner office.

"I insist on seeing Mr. Ingram," Cathleen heard. "Appointment stuff! He'll want to see me, all right . . . Martin is the name—Miss Arline Martin . . . I'll go in and wait for him!"

She refused to be stopped. The door of the office burst open and she swept in.

"I'm going to wait here for Mr. Ingram!" she told Cathleen.

The strange, insistent girl was very beautiful, Cathleen thought. The enormous summer fur of white fox draping her shoulders, the dangling gypsy hoops in her ears, and the gas-pump red of her frock and hat and high-heeled sandals made it impossiblee for any man to be satisfie with one look at her.

On her side Arline was annoyed by Cathleen's youthful beauty and the music of her speaking voice. Ingram had this girl at his side while he worked. What couldn't she do with an opportunity like that!

"I shan't disturb you. You can go on with your work. I'll just sit here and wait."

She seated herself in a swirl of white fur and scarlet skirts, and lighted a cigarette fitted into a long slim holder. She was smoking her third cigarette when the door opened and Ingram came in.

"How do you do, Miss Martin. Nice of you to call but I'm afraid I can't afford myself the pleasure of receiving you in the midst of an extremely busy afternoon.

"No? Not even one little minute for me?" Before he could reply, she went on hastily, "I've heard nothing from you about the play. Mr. Gresham was so interested in what you said. He's re-writing it—and we feel sure that between us we'd have a wonderful hit, if you'd only help us! You did make me think you'd help us, Mr. Ingram, silly of me, but I really thought you meant it."

Ingram, far from indifferent to feminine appeal under favorable circumstances, had his mind occupied just now with a critical financial problem.

He said now, "I'm sorry if I roused hope; doomed to disappointment. I was not, as I told you, impressed by your friend's play. Further discussion of the matter is inopportune—and useless."

Arline all but spat at him. Her face, Cathleen noticed in surprise, went suddenly small and ugly with disappointment and rage. "You'll regret this, Mr. Ingram!" And there were both viciousness and threat in the tone of her voice.

At the moment, it was evident, she hated him, but her rage was impotent, for what can you do when you are poor and a nobody, against a plutocrat who refuses to betray the weaknesses of a man? She swept to the door, clutching at the one thing left her, a good exit. But unsmiling and silent, he was there first, holding the door open for her.

Ingram turned back, dropping the irrelevant incident from his mind. "We'll go on from where I left off, Miss McCarthy," he said, "with that letter to the Pittsburgh office."

It was nearly eight o'clock before Alspaugh and Cathleen had cleared up the accumulated work. Her eyes, fingers and back were tired, and she had not eaten since noon when worry had made it impossible for her to do more than swallow a cup of tomato bisque and a cracker. As she sat down at the corner table in the speakeasy, she was tremulous and nervous, partly because of her physical condition and partly because of the difficulty she experienced in framing her appeal to Alspaugh.

She would have to lead up gradually of course to her embarrassing, perhaps unheard-of request.

"How is Mrs. Alspaugh? How terrible that accident was!"

"Oh, she's much better. Much, much better," Alspagh proclaimed blithely. "It might have been a whole lot worse!"

Though he, too, had worked hard and late, he was in high spirits, for the utility stocks he had bought with Ingram's money were already worth several hundred dollars more than he paid for them. Whenever he had looked at the ticker that day, he had found himself a little nearer the amount he needed to pay his debt. The closing price had been the highest of all.

"I'm so glad. I saw Mrs. Alspaugh when she came into the office one day last month," Cathleen pursued, ingenuously flattering him. "She's so pretty, isn't she? It would have been too bad if her face had been marked."

"Yes, that's what she thought. That's all she worried about. A three thousand dollar car gone phut—that was the least of her troubles. Women are all alike, extravagant. No idea of the value of money!"

After she had eaten, Cathleen felt better, and over the salad she found the words she had tentatively put together tumbling effortlessly from her lips.

"Mr. Alspaugh, if a person were in great need of money, do you think the company would possibly make an advance against future salary?"

LOAN IS DISCUSSED

"What's that?" he asked, startled.

"It's a—a personal emergency. I need—three hundred dollars." The sum seemed so great to her that her voice shook as she named it.

"Three hundred dollars!" Homer, echoing her, made three hundred dollars sound like three thousand. "My dear girl, that's a lot of money. I'm sure I couldn't say how Mr. Macomber would view such a request. You'd have to take it up with him. I'm afraid he wouldn't entertain it."

"That's why I'm speaking to you first," said Cathleen. "I thought if you'd say a word—it's terribly important to me; I can't explain how important! I'm getting forty dollars now. I could take thirty, or even twenty-five, till this is paid. I—"

Suddenly her chin shook. She felt tears threatening her, and turned blindly to clutch at her bag, which held her handkerchief.

"Listen, Cathleen, please don't cry," he said. "I'll let you have three hundred dollars. You could have anything I've got. I've always beeen crazy about you. You must know that." He leaned over and laid his hot moist hand on her arm.

CATHLEEN IS ANGRY

Cathleen wrenched her wrist free and slipped out of his reach. "Mr. Alspaugh!" she exclaimed, "aren't you ashamed to say a thing of that sort to me! What have I ever done that gave you the idea I'd listen to such things? I thought you were decent and friendly. You aren't either one, but you'll know better than to speak to me like that again. You wouldn't like it if I told Mr. Ingram about this, and I will if you bother me again, in the office or out. Forget about the money. I'm sorry I mentioned it. That far it was my fault, but it never entered my head you'd be such a ——. I won't say it, but after this when I work late, I'll get my dinner at home. And now good night. Don't you dare come with me. I know the way to the subway well enough."

24 SHIPS NAMED FOR U. S. NAVAL INCREASE

By International News Service

Washington, Aug. 27—Further details of plans for the navy's 1935 construction program to carry on the work of building up the American fleet to full strength became known today.

The 24 new warships the navy's general board will recommend to the budget bureau next year will include:

One 15,000-ton aircraft carrier to replace the Langley.

Two six-inch gun 8000-ton cruisers to replace the Milwaukee and Omaha.

Six submarines.

This program for the next fiscal year is subject to White House approval but high naval officers are confident it will receive President Roosevelt's blessing, especially as the outlook for the preliminary naval discussions with the Japanese at London in October fails to revive hope of naval disarmament at the 1935 conference.

A student flier damaged his plane, but escaped injury at Metropolitan Airport, Norwood, yesterday when he misjudged his distance in making a landing, overturning the machine in a ditch adjoining the field.

He is Ray Vittum, 27, of Kendall Green. Airport attaches rushed to the badly damaged plane, fearing a tragedy. As they approached, Vittum extricated himself with a smile, entirely unhurt. The plane was badly damaged.

2 SISTERS DIE IN BARN FIRE

Guilford, Vt., Aug. 27—Two sisters died here from burns received when they were trapped in a burning barn. Eleanor Yeaw, three, was dead when found, while her sister, Evelyn, two, died in the Brattleboro Hospital several hours later.

Evelyn was rescued from the blaze by her mother, Mrs. Warren Yeaw, 27, who was taken to the hospital with Evelyn, suffering from shock and severe burns. The mother's condition is said to be serious.

A four-year-old brother of the dead girls said that while riding in the car of one of the farm hands he picked up matches with which he played in the loft of the barn with his sisters.

Mrs. Yeaw rushed into the burning structure and rescued Evelyn, who was hanging through a scuttle hole, while her husband called firemen.

The brother escaped safely. Several hours after the firemen found the older girl's body.

Bishop to Retain All Present Aids

District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex spiwed rumors that certain of the assistant district attorneys were to resign, or that the number was o be increased for political reasons. He declared:

"None of my assistants are to resign, so far as I know. I have made no political deal with anyone, nor have I even intimated that anyone outside my present staff would receive any appointments."

Boy Gets 9 Cents for $400 Wardrobe

The luck of a Lynn junk collector will change if police are successful in locating him today.

After Mrs. Mary Mason, of Friend street, reported that $400 worth of clothing had been stoltn from her home during her absence, her grandson confessed to police that he had sold the wardrobe to a junk collector for nine cents.

Roosevelt's Aid Puzzled by Political Muddle

Improved in health, Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt, plans to extend his vacation with his family at the secluded Howe cottage at Horseneck Beach, Westport, for the greater part of September.

Mr. Howe, attired in rough working clothes, daily engages in his two hobbies, carpenter work and photography. In the basement of the cottage he is putting the finishing touches n a dark room.

Neither on the political situation in Massachusetts, nor the newly formed bi-partisan American Liberty League could the presidential secretary be drawn out. Although evincing keen interest in both subjects and in the coming Maine election, he declined to make public comment.

He did say, with a sly smile, that he had married a Massachusetts girl more than 20 years ago, but hasn't yet been able to fathom Massachusetts politics.

When questioned about the Curley-Cole battle for the Democratic nomination, Howe simply told his favorite story about the man who, looking out the window and seeing his wife engaged in a tussle with a grizzly bear, shouted: "Go it, Ma." "Go it, Grizzley."

WAGNER URGED TO FIGHT ARMS

By Universal Service

New York, Aug. 27—United States Senator Robert F. Wagner was requested today to lead the fight for a national law governing firearms and other dangerous weapons.

Wagner's leadership was asked in a telegram sent by Bennett E. Siegelstein, attorney and one of the organizers of the American Safety League.

The league started a similar drive in 1925, but little was accomplished then, Siegelstein said. The new campaign will be carried on vigorously, he declared.

According to Siegelstein, there are almost as many firearms laws as there are states, which causes confusion and makes it easy for criminals to obtain weapons. He said:

"The Hearst newspapers are to be highly commended for the support they are giving toward the enactment of a national law."

Gas Kills Child, Mother Is Dying

The Liggett & Myers tobacco plant in Smyrna.

—let's see how Chesterfield handles its Turkish tobacco

A man who recently returned from a Mediterranean cruise wrote us as follows about Chesterfield Cigarettes —

"ONE of the first things I noticed in Smyrna was the fine new up-to-date tobacco factory run by the people who make Chesterfield Cigarettes.

"The Turkish tobacco they buy there is shipped in from all parts of Turkey and Greece.

"I saw them grading it, and packing it into bales—thousands of tiny leaves in each bale—and then putting it on the boat for shipment to America.

"It made me realize how important Turkish tobacco is to a good cigarette."

And that means something—good Turkish tobacco has a lot to do with Chesterfield's milder better taste.

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

Prof. William F. Ogburn of the University of Chicago, formerly in the consumers' division of the NRA, has been making a statistical study of the American people as of 1920 compared with 1932, which has been published by the American Sociological Association. Some of the findings are of extreme interest.

Robert E. Roger

For instance there has been an increase in the number of marriages but a definite decline in the birth rate, at the rate of about 10 per 1000. The death rate, too, has declined over this period about 3 per 1000.

Immigration has virtually come to a standstill. In 1920 it caused an increase of some 800,000 in the population, whereas in 1932 more people left the country than entered it, so that there was an actual loss. With all these figures the Professor's conclusion is that the population of the United States has been virtually standing still during the depression. The average American household contained five people in 1920 but only four in 1932.

Apparently the depression hasn't seriously interferred with marriage, but it has made couples very careful about having children. This was perhaps to be expected, even apart from hard times, since it has been perfectly obvious for a decade at least that birth control discussion and propaganda have been making notable progress in spite of the existing laws and the agitation to keep them intact or even to strengthen them. Apparently a general state of prosperity and luxury affects a country's birth-rate unfavorably, while a depression after prosperity frightens the people in exactly the same way. Otherwise economic conditions do not seem to affect marriage per se. From 1890 to 1930 the number of married persons in the whole population has increased from 56 per cent to 61, surely not a large figure over 30 years.

On the other hand the depression seems actually to have called a halt to divorce. The number of divorces is down to 1.3 per thousand, the lowest number since 1870. I suppose the answer is that divorce is an expensive luxury in hard times. Also, I hope, that couples who have to work together in straightened finances may develop more loyalty and appreciation of the other's difficulties than in days of plenty of money and amusement.

These population trends are the more important items of the reports. Certain other facts, however, are not without their interest.

A few less people, proportional to the population and notwithstanding the virtual doubling of the vote by woman suffrage, are voting today than voted fifty years ago. That obviously means a fairly serious loss of interest in matters political.

To offset that, the increase in high school attendance among our young people is rather startling. From 1920 (also a depression period) to 1932 the number of high school pupils doubled, from about 25 per cent of all children of high school age to more than 50 per cent. Again the reasons seem to contradictory. The first part of the past decade was a period of increasing wealth and sophistication, which helped fill the schools. The past few years have been years of unemployment, which also filled the schools. Both testify to the great increase in the popular faith in the public schools, even although in the past two years many schools all over the country have had to close.

Sadder aspects of the past 12 years are to be found in the great increase of insanity from 45 per 100,000 to 55 per 100,000 over a period of about eleven years. Over approximately the same period the number of people serving time in prison has increased from 35 per 100,000 to 50. That makes 105 per 100,000 in either asylums or prisons, which is, I imagine, a very high record. And, incidentally, other statistics inform us that the age of greatest incidence of criminality is in the neighborhood of 19. There is the real tragedy.

Economically the most significant loss is in the number of millionaires, from 60,000 in 1928 to 5000 in 1932. That's a lot of millionaires to lose in a country, particularly when the money loss by 55 millionaires was not distributed among those with less money, simply vanished into thin air, went up in smoke, so to speak.

Americans have been recently economizing on telegrams, telephone calls and letters (three cent postage!), but are still traveling far more than in 1921 though less than in 1928.

The percentage of population in production of goods has fallen far below that of 1870. Farm land values have dropped tragically. The income of the nation has fallen in less than five years from 25 to 35 billions.

But more married women are working than ever before, almost 10 per cent of all the wedlocked. There is at least one bright outlook—for the men.

BOUDOIR RAID ALARMS BEACON HILL

Harbor Illuminated as Flames Sweep Island Dock

NIGHT PROWLER ALSO INVADES CHARLESTOWN

Boudoir windows were being fitted with new locks in downtown Boston homes today and police were ordered to pick up all stragglers in the Beacon Hill and Charlestown residential districts as young women told similar stories of bed-chambers invaded by midnight prowlers.

Their experiences came as a quick sequel to that of a South End mother, who was terrified by the appearance of a man in her room only a few hours before her baby was born.

Of the new boudoir raids under special investigation today, first occurred in the home of Miss Marie Adamowski, 16, of West Cedar street, Beacon Hill.

SEIZED BY THROAT

The prowler there, Miss Adamowski said, was a red-faced man, clad only in a union suit.

He crawled from a fire escape through a window into the bedchamber occupied by the girl, her married sister, and the latter's young son.

The sleeping women were awakened as the prowler seized Miss Adamowski by the throat. She pulled free and screamed. The older sister, rushing to the rescue, was knocked backward to the floor. As both women screamed the intruder fled.

CHARLESTOWN INVADED

A short time after the Beacon Hill boudoir raid, Mrs. Ernestine Bellivance, of Soley street, Charlestown, was awakened by the sound of someone removing the screen from a window of her bedroom.

As the intruder started to crawl into the chamber, Mrs. Bellivance snapped on the lights and screamed for help. The prowler fled.

17 RESCUED FROM ISLE

Seventeen men and women rescued by the coast guard after spending many hours marooned on Great Brewster island in the harbor after their power boat went aground, were none the worse for their experience today.

The victims started out in the motor boat J. W. of Miami, owned by R. R. Huffman of Buffalo, for a fishing trip when between Middle Brewster and Great Brewster island the boat grounded.

The whole party was transferred to the island in a tender and the Pemberton coast guard was notified, by Maurice A. Babcock, keeper of Boston Light, who observed their plight.

Fourten of the passengers were brought to East Boston, while the remaining three were left to await the tide, necessary to free the boat.

Among those rescued were Jason Beebe, Lawrence Bianco, Miss Florence Moran, Harold McLellan, Terry Murphy, Ed Lang, John C. Whitehead, Peter Joyce, Edward Carroll, John Scannell, Charles Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Nat Gormerly and Miss Alice Ford, all of East Boston.

Foley's Aids Get Siegel Probe Facts

State Detectives John F. Stokes and Joseph L. Ferrari were preparing to go into conference today with members of District Attorney Foley's staff regarding the slaying of ate SiNegel, World War veteran and former ew England welterweight boxing champion. They expect to confer on the case for two days.

Sea Going Firebug Sought in Harbor Island Blaze

Harbor police were checking up today on evidence indicating that a sea-going pyromaniac may have been responsible for a spectacular fire which destroyed the municipal pier and coal shed on Rainsford Island.

The blaze, clearly visible from towns and cities within a radius of 20 miles, caused the sounding of several needless fire alarms on the mainland.

SHORE ROADS JAMMED

South Shore traffic jammed in a tie-up which was not untangled for hours, as motorists by thousands attempted to drive to vantage points from which the Rainsford Island flames, leaping 100 feet in air, could best be seen.

Winthrop, East Boston, and South Shore police and fire departments were swamped with inquiries which kept telephone operators busy until early today and which clogged switchboards at central exchanges.

Damage done by the fire, itself, was negligible, city officials estimated today.

The Rainsford Island coal shed and pier had been out of use for several years. Except for campers and picknickers the island had no tenants.

THRILL SEEKER SOUGHT

First theory of the cause of the blaze was that it had been accidentally kindled by casual visitors.

The newest thory under investigation by fire and police authorities is that some thrill seeker touched off the old pier in anticipation of just the spectacle that was provided.

MALDEN PICKET HEARING SOON

Hearings on the petition of the Gregory and Read Wood Heel Co. of Malden for injunctions against picketing and against interference with its business will be held in Supreme court at Boston, Wednesday.

The latest petition filed by Gregory and Read would have the court decide the clause in certain agreements, between union shoe factories and trade unions, by which the manufacturers are alleged to have agreed that only union made products should be used in the manufacture of shoes in union shops.

HUMAN TORCH DEATH PROBED

Mystery today surrounded the police probe into the circumstances surrounding the death of Elucio A. Byko, 18, of Irving street, Salem, as Chief of Police Edward T. Pierce, of Peabody, ordered a search for a boy alleged to have been with Byko when his clothing was afire.

With his clothing afire, Byko was found in the used car enclosure of the Central Auto Wrecking Company, Howley street, Peabody. He died shortly after arrival at the J. B. Thomas Hospital, Peabody.

Police have discovered that the dead youth's mother was burned to death in a Middleton house a year ago.

2 LINERS CARRY 1200 ON TOURS

Two transatlantic liners with a passenger list of nearly 1200, comprising close to 250 New Englanders, were heading for practically the same ports on cruises today.

The Franconia of the Cunard White Star Line and the California of the Anchor Line left East Boston with cruise passengers within an hour of each other after debarking those from previous cruises. Both will go to Quebec, the Canadian North Cape and Bermuda, with the Franconia making an additional stop at the Bay of Isles, N. F.

Among the distinguished passengers aboard the Franconia are President J. B. Stride, of Biddeford and Saco railroad, and Mrs. Stride; George F. S. Singleton of Franklin, former president of Franklin Trust Company; and Vice President Clarence G. McDevitt of the New England Telephone Company.

Cambridge Hunts Bedroom Prowler

Cambridge police are hunting a 200-pound prowler, who has been terrorizing women residents of the city by entering bedroom windows.

The latest victim of fright is Miss Julia Wunder, 39, of Main street, Cambridge. She told police the intruder fled from the outside of her window when she screamed.

ARMED BANDITS ROB DRUGGIST

Police are today hunting two men who heldup and robbed the Pearl Drug Copany, Blue Hill avenue and Seaver street, Roxbury, of $152, after threatening to shoot Henry Viscott, 29, son o fthe owner, when he gave them only $75.

Viscott told police of the Dudley street station that the men loitered outside the store until customers left. Then they entered and with drawn revolvers in hand demanded money.

After Viscott handed over $75, the contents of the cash register, the men demanded more. They pointed their revolvers at him and threatened to kill him.

Viscott then emptied a cash drawer used for payment of light bills, containing $35. Still unsatisfied, one of the men went through Viscott pockets taking $15.

Boy Swallows Tiny Whistle

Doctors at the Massachusetts General Hospital were facing the problem of removing a small whistle from Alfred Jordan, 12, of Fiske street, Revere.

The boy swallowed the whistle while in front of the fire station on Broadway, Revere. After receiving first aid treatment at the Chelsea Memorial Hospital he was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital, where it was declared the whistle had passed beyond the point of danger.

New York, Aug. 27—Diary: Out to see a Weyman Adams dog canvas and to a Greek cafe Tom Millard told me about for a tomato omelet. Home and a letter from the hard-fall comics, Mitchell and Durant. Also a note from William Lyon Phelps and a Vancouver fishing card from Corey Ford.

O. O. McIntyre

Typed a spell and off charioteering with my wife to Far-Rockaway, the first time there in a dozen years. And along the way a jerry-built roadside hutch advertised the former Follies girl, Imogene Wilson, as an entertainer. So tossing sticks in the sea for the Boston to retrieve.

To the city to dine and talked to Gary Cooper, of the movies, and his lady. Also saw Mrs. W. R. Hearst, Mrs. Margaret Amory and Frances Langford of the radio. Early to bed reading a gripping first novel, "Slim," about journeymen linemen, so exciting I did not put it down until 4 a. m.

Because I was pupped in the shadows of the ten-twent-thirt, any revival of their blood and thunder draws me down front on the aisle. After witnessing "Hawkshaw, the Detective," recently, I fell to wondering why there has been no rediscovering of "Bertha, the Beautiful Cloak Model"—or was it "Nellie?" I never remember which was the cloak model and which the sewing machine girl, and Owen Davis does not list those classics in his otherwise revealing paragraph in Who's Who.

Street begging in New York for the able-bodied moocher has touched an all-time low. Mendicants are facing rebuffs as stiffling as a general strike. Charity organization propaganda that promiscuous alms giving defeats their endeavors is largely responsible for growing indifference. The panhandler who used to pick up $10 and $15 a day finds it difficult now to garner cigaret change.

Sport togs that offer little variety save in color have completely rubbed out the summer dandy, a distinct tizzy type that shimmered with the heat waves. On Broadway it used to be the actor, enjoying the seasonal lay-off and in full pocket. Kyrle Bellew, for instance, was the first to promenade in all white duck, red tie and ice cream sneakers. Raymond Hitchcock sported the first Panama with gaudy band, turned down in the back. George M. Cohan standardized the bamboo cane and the Roger brothers gave a sartorial perk with wide black silk girdles instead of the customary suspenders. And is any wearing apparel so hideous as suspenders?

Birth of slang note—"Chicken feed" as a term for small change was popularized, if not coined, by Barnum, the showman.

Writing rooms of big department stores have a daily quota of genteel and almost poverty stricken widows flung at Fate. They are mostly those who have an income so slim they can only occupy a high up hall-bedroom and subsist on a furtively cooked tin fare. The writing rooms give the Old Lady 31's opportunity to watch other people and remember things about the other half of life without a feeling of intrusion.

Circus clowns have become dregs on the amusement market. The generation of youngsters, who in the old days, thrilled to splotch-faced mimes today finds them tedious. The clowns in their bounding opulence were paid top salary of $40 a week and keep. The average was $30. Marceline, Silvers and Bluch never made more than $75. Today there are more clowns than jobs at $15 a week. A clown boarding house on 10th avenue is now vacant. It once had 50 patrons.

BLAZE PERILS 20 FISHERMEN

Twenty fishermen have the harbor police to thank that they are alive today.

The crew of the police boat Watchman prevented a possible explosion when the fishermen were thrown into terror as their boat caught fire while taking on gasolene off the Fish Pier.

After extinguishing the blaze, the boat which is owned by James Mara of Ship street, Medford, was towed to the Boston Molasses Company and the party, landed. No injuries were reported.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

HANG HEADS, HERE COMES BABY

I feel bilious, slightly green,
When cute kiddies on the screen
Act the way they always act;
Were I not so full of tact,
Timid as a worried fawn,
I'd shout: Stop! This can't go on!"
At the antics of each minx
Who gives me digestive kinks.
Were I fearless, were I brave,
Though it meant an early grave,
I would rise and vent my spleen
At the kiddies on the screen
I would sneer and snort and shout.
As it is, I stick it out—
Poor public opinion fearing
Punk—laughing, applauding, cheering
Just as all the others do.
They're afraid they'd be mobbed, too.
Cattle! Sheep! For shame! For shame!
On our cowardice the blame
Rests that we are forced to wait,
For revenge on lagging fate.
Kiddies—even cute ones—grow up,
Then the little mutts will show up.
Now they blithely make us squirm,
Someday they will be the worm,
Timid, shy, afraid to turn—
Although they may yearn and yearn
Some day they'll be adults, too,
Some day turn a bilious hue
Seeing kiddies on the screen

By AUSTEN LAKE

I WILL LEAVE IT TO YOU whether Colonel Dave Egan, my colleague and horse author on this journal, does not owe me the $40, give or take a few shillings, which I lose at Narragansett Saturday. Any court would see the justice of my claim.

Austen Lake

For some time now I have been listening to Colonel Egan tell quaint, cynical yarns about the "finger men" and similar come-on characters at the horse track who pry people loose from their liquid cash.

So, Saturday I am standing near a pari mutuel porthole with my fist literally alive with currency, when a little man in shepherd's plaid, a rhinestone scarf pin and a very horsey flavor, sidles up—Why do sinister characters always "sidle"?—and asks, "Have you gotta match?"

"O-O," says I sotto voce, producing the lightstick. Because Colonel Egan has been saying to beware of any guy who wants to borrow a match at the race track, because one thing leads to another and presently you will have all your assets vacuumed right out of your wallet.

SO I AM NOT ASTONISHED when the little man expels a lungful of cigarette vapor and inquiries, "Who do you like in this race?"

Being crafty, under the Colonel's coaching, I go into my verbal footwork, and say, "I dunno, and who do you?" So the little man gently snatches my program and pencils X's beside a horse in each of the following races, adding, "This will make you very grateful, and after the final race I will be standing right here in case you will want to give me a token of your appreciation."

But I am too smart for that. So I do not play the little man's choices. Instead I follow Colonel Egan's own tips, which come fresh from the barns.

So today I am billing the Colonel, because the little man's dope rings the gong six of seven races and he misses only on Fred Almy, which everybody else, including the Colonel, misses too. Because, I figure, what with sewing the seeds of suspicion and misleading me on his own tips, the Colonel stymies me from $250 profits.

I will forgive him that. But not the $40, give or take a few shillings, which I lose.

RUBE MARQUARD IS A TALL GENT with a slightly wry neck and lacquered hair, who presides behind one of the Narragansett wickets. Rube, as you recall, is the pitcher who in 1912 ran 19 victories together for the Giants. And right now he is a little uneasy as to whether "Schoolboy" Rowe of the Tigers is going to add three more victories to his already 16 straight, to equal his mark.

"Only," Rube tells me, "I really won 20 straight. Because, for some reason, I was chiseled out of a game just after I had won 16."

And he relates how Jeff Tesreau, who is coaching baseball at Dartmouth, started a game against the Phillies, and how when the Phils suddenly hit on him to tie the score at 3-all, he (Rube) was rushed to the rescue by John McGraw.

"I retired the side," says Rube. "And in the next inning the Giants scored another run to win 4-3. But, for some reason I never got official credit, which went to Tesreau."

ONE OF THE QUEEREST QUIRKS in college football schedule-making comes next October 6, when Columbia, winner against Stanford at the Rose Bowl last New Year's and generally conceded the eastern championship, meets Yale in the opening game of the latter's schedule.

That was the main reason why Yale's head coach, "Ducky" Pond, and his assistant, Charley Root, spent the last week listening carefully to Little's sage comment and studying his blackboard scrawls at his summer football course in Boston.

They hope, by mastering Little's methods, to turn the edge of his own tools against him in October. But the chief tool in Little's kit, which they will not be able to fathom, is his personality with youngsters and his ability to squeeze the utmost out of mediocre material.

A FOG OF GREAT MYSTERY surrounds T. O. M. Sopwith's crew of his America's Cup challenger, Endeavour, which are amateurs recruited from England's upstairs yachting society. Eleven own and sail their own boats at home. Six are graduates of Oxford, two of Cambridge and one of Harvard.

The physical well being of the lads is supervised by Mrs. Sopwith, who rules them much as an American football coach trains his football squad.

Curfew at 9 o'clock on the dot. No smoking or sipping of spirituous beverages on or off duty. No pastries or rich foods. The crew rises at 6 sharp.

Daily they undergo a manual of muscle building exercises, such as rowing little dinghies around the waters of Conanicut Island or jogging along the sands of the beach.

Observers tell me that the boys are undertaking this America's Cup adventure in a varsity spirit, and that, if the Endeavour were equipped with boilers, they could supply the steam from the flame of their own enthusiasm.

WHEN WALTER JOHNSON WAS PITCHING for Washington he never lifted an eyebrow or spoke an uncouth word to umpires. But several American League arbiters tell me that, this year, Walter's former mildness is giving way to frequent wrangling, and now he will step up and pour out a volley of language standard with any other field boss. . . . Goose Goslin, Detroit's ace slugger, was discovered originally by Umpire Bill McGowan, but ever since Goose assaulted Bill verbally over a certain close decision, the two do not speak . . . And then there is the case of Frank Frisch and Jimmy Wilson, Cardinal and Phillie pilots, who are the National League No. 1 feudists. Yet until last year when Frank became manager of the Cards, he and Wilson were roommates and inseparable companions. Wilson says Frisch became a czar overnight. Frank says Wilson was jealous of his promotion. In the end Jimmy was traded to Philadelphia, and now the two never lose a chance to blister each other at battle-sight range.

Hands and Man on Threshold of Epic American League Pitching Feat

Schoolboy Rowe smiles as he peers through the big hands which have pitched him to 16 consecutive American League triumphs for the Tigers, equalling the record now jointly held by Joe Wood, Walter Johnson and Lefty Grove.

Was the elongated Bengal hurler elated when he beat Washington for his 16th straight victory? Here Schoolboy is shown kissing the ball that he hurled to win the game which tied the A. L. record. He plans to keep it as one of his most cherished mementos.

This unusual picture shows Rowe making the final pitch of the game against the Senators which permitted him to tie the record for straight victories and put him on the threshold to write an epic performance in American League history. The picture shows the ball on its way to Jonathan Stone, the batter. The Washington outfielder lifted it to Goslin to end the game. (Pictures by International News Photo Service.)

MAX SCHMELING ON TRAIL OF MAX BAER

By Associated Press

Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 27—Undisputed kingpin of German heavyweights [illegible] Max Schmeling turned his attention today to the United States and the possibility of a world championship match with Max Baer.

The Black Uhlan of the Rhine emerged from comparative fistic obscurity yesterday to batter down Walter Neusel, blonde Teuton youngster, in [illegible] bout [illegible] before more than 100,000 spectators.

Schmeling's victory, gained on a technical knockout when Neusel failed to answer the bell for the ninth round, carried with it the German heavyweight title. Much more important was the effect it might have on Schmeling's chances of getting a shot at the world title.

Schmeling plans to sail for the United States next month and undoubtedly will figure in negotiations designed to find an opponent for Baer's first title defense next summer.

WON TITLE ON FOUL

Schmeling won the heavyweight championship on a foul from Jack Sharkey in 1930 and lost it by decision two years later. He was labeled as "through" by some experts after he had been stopped by Baer in ten rounds [illegible] by Steve Hamas [illegible] to a draw by [illegible] earlier this year.

Max [illegible] Neusel, the youngster who had campaigned so successfully in the United States the last year. He let Neusel do all the leading and then stepped in with stiff body counters that sapped the youngster's strength. Schmeling opened up cuts on Neusel's face as early as the second round, ripped open a gash over Walter's right eye in the fourth and hammered away at his body without a let-up in the first seven rounds.

As Neusel obviously was tiring fast Schmeling leaped to the attack in the eighth round, battered his foe to the ropes and handed him a terrific trouncing until the bell sounded.

OUT ON HIS FEET

Neusel was out on his feet as he walked slowly to his corner. His seconds, including the American, Jimmy Bronson, worked over him frantically but Neusel could not answer the bell for the ninth round and Schmeling was awarded the victory on a technical knockout.

Schmeling outboxed Neusel all the way and had little or no trouble in blocking the younger man's wild swings nor in tying him up tight in the clinches. Schmeling weighed 193½ pounds, Neusel 188.

Working Up Speed for Ross

McLarnin Should Win, Says Runyon---Rates Walker at Top

By Damon Runyon

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Making Barney Ross favorite over Jimmy McLarnin [illegible] next month is what the bookmakers [illegible] opinion of the writer.

Ross is a real good lightweight on the order of, say, Freddy Welsh or Sammy Mandell. He cannot punch. His strength is his boxing intelligence, his defensive ability, and his courage. The writer thinks Ross measures up well with any of our lightweights of the past 20 years.

But he does not think Ross would have had any business in the ring with a welterweight like Mickey Walker, or Jack Britton, or Ted Kid Lewis.

Unless the Irishman from Vancouver is all done, washed up, a hollow shell, a has-been, and all that sort of thing, he ought to lick Ross.

The way for McLarnin to lick Ross [illegible] knock him out in the first few rounds [illegible] about it. Ross has [illegible] McLarnin [illegible] has a [illegible] hand and [illegible] wonder on defense.

[illegible] Walker was not a better puncher than McLarnin. He merely had more desperate fighting spirit.

The writer rates Walker the greatest welterweight he ever saw, with Britton second and Ted Kid Lewis third.

[illegible] for Ted Kid Lewis [illegible] bashing, crashing Ted Lewis—was a real [illegible] whipped Ross. He might have whipped McLarnin.

The writer can scarcely imagine Ross laying a set hand on Britton when Britton was at his best.

McLarnin [illegible] one of the greatest [illegible] is better. There was no evidence of his punch in his first fight with Ross, a dumb fight on McLarnin's part. He let Ross make him fight as Ross desired.

This time, if he has any pride, and any ability left, McLarnin should not leave the issue long in doubt.

JOHNSON BEST LEFT FIELDER IN LEAGUE

By Joe Cashman

When Fenway Park was first thrown open to the public, back in 1912, there was a steep incline in left field which soon became known as Duffy's Cliff, because of the agility of Duffy Lewis, now Braves coach, in scaling the peak and pulling down drives which threatened the peace and security of those old Red Sox.

Just as Duffy was the only fly-chaser of his day who could play that difficult bank, Johnson is the only gardener in the loop today who knows how the present patch with its tricky fence, troublesome stand and difficult corner, should be patrolled.

SAVES PLENTY OF RUNS

His knowledge coupled with the strongest and most accurate throwing arm in the league, has saved the Sox countless games this season, while all visiting leftfielders keep running around like chickens with their heads chopped off trying to guard the pasture.

Every native blow off that barrier is a double standing up. Two out of three alien smashes over Johnson's noggin are outs at second base. Over half the balls Roy catches would be played off the fence by other outfielders.

Wes Ferrell lost the first game to his old mates, 3-2, but he'd have never come that close but for his leftfielder. Moe Berg hit the fence in the fourth inning. Roy threw him out at second by a city block. Knickerbocker did the same in the sixth with the same result.

Roy didn't have a chance to perform his specialty in the nightcap, which saw "Lefty" Ostermueller beat Chief Harder, 5-2, but he did throw out Averill at the plate trying to score from second with a run which would have given the visitors the lead in the sixth.

BATS THOSE RUNS IN

He also bashed out a triple which knocked in two runs in the seventh after the brilliant Bill Werber had chased home a marker when broke a 2-2 tie with a two-base bunt, perfectly placed over the heads of an infield drawn in hoping to frustrate a sacrifice.

Johnson often gives one the jitters going after fly balls. He's as likely as not to let a grounder squirt through his legs. He can be daffiness personified on the base paths.

With all his faults we think he has enough virtues to be rated the best left fielder in the league. Anyway, he can play for our money out there any day.

With a batting average of over 330, he is one of the eight leading stickers. He's second only to Lou Gehrig in runs batted in. No outfielder covers more ground or has a more deadly arm. He can give Werber a close race around the bases. No player in the game exhibits more hustle, courage and fight.

He couldn't satisfy "Bucky" Harris in Detroit, but he's surely doing a good job of it at the Fens.

By Joe Cashman

The Red Sox must take the [illegible] Indians in the current series at the Fens. The visitors remain 1½ games up on the Fenway flock as a result of splitting the Sunday twin-bill.

The park appeared well over half-[illegible] the Tigers and Yanks on the two previous Sundays.

Two of the three defeats Wes Ferrell has suffered have been administered by his former mates from Cleveland.

He burned up when they foiled his efforts to gain his 13th victory in Sunday's opener, throwing his glove from the mound clear to the dugout when he was pounded for five hits and three runs in the first frame, and kicking the resin bag all over the bench when the final out found him on the short end of a 3—2 count.

Ferrell had two chances to tie the count with his mighty bat that [illegible] give him a 3 to 2 win over the White Sox on Wednesday last. He was fanned by Oral Hildebrand on one occasion and robbed of a triple [illegible]

Moe Berg, cast off by the Senators not so long ago, is now the Indians' only active catcher. Glen Myatt is out for the season with a broken leg and Frankie Pytlak has a lame knee.

[illegible] spelled at third base by Johnny Burnett in the opener, which was probably just as well for the Sox. Willie returned in the nightcap to get three hits, including a triple and a walk, in four times up.

Manager Walter Johnson is traveling with his club but he's obeying physicians' orders not to leave the bench while recuperating from a severe attack of [illegible]

A fan in a box behind the plate put Max Bishop out in the seventh inning of the opener. He touched a Bishop foul just before it bounced off the glove of Moe Berg. Umpire Kolls ruled the batter out.

The Indians certainly had the Indian sign on "Moose" Solters. Hildebrand fanned him three times and Harder twice. He managed to get a single off each hurler, though.

[illegible] hit the leftfield fence in the fourth frame of the opener, and he was thrown out by yards at second on Roy Johnson's perfect strike to the bag. When Knickerbocker hit to the same spot in the sixth Nick was warned by Coach [illegible] but Johnson's [illegible] the [illegible]

Lary saved Ostermueller all kinds of trouble when he made a spectacular bare-handed stop of a Galatzer drive and forced Berg at third in the fifth inning of the nightcap. A single followed. Then Johnson rushed to the hurler's rescue in the next frame with the throw that nipped Averill at the plate.

Werber's bunt, which paved the way for the Sox winning rally in the seventh inning of the nightcap, was as surprising as his recent walk-steal. With the score tied, runners on first and second and nobody out, everybody knew he was up to bunt, but nobody imagined he'd do it in [illegible] the infielders [illegible] he pushed the ball over second-sacker Sammy Hale's head for a double.

Trosky's throw to Hildebrand covering first for the final out of the opening game was the fastest pitch of the day. Why the ball didn't drive right through the outstretched hands of the hurler will always remain a mystery to those who saw it. And if it had, the game would have been tied up because the Sox had a runner on third at the time.

Lou Gehrig hit three home runs to bring his season's total to 42, as the Yankees were taking a doubleheader from the White Sox. The New York first sacker is now four up on Jimmy Foxx, his closest rival in the circuit drive race, and is setting a faster pace than did Babe Ruth when the latter set his record of 60 homers in 1927.

Hope Gimbel cleared the barrier at the North Shore horse show at Stony Brook, L. I., but Weary River, one of the competing hunters, failed to make the hurdle. MIKEL AND HIS LEADING JOCKEY HAVE HEX ON STEWARDS

GETTING AWAY WITH 'MURDER' AT 'GANSETT

By Dave Egan

No, I am not a chronic knocker.

But there is one question that one paper in New England should have the courage to ask: What is this strange power that J. D. Mikel, owner of some 30 horses quartered at this park, and his leading jockey, Tommy King, exercise over the stewards?

The crusading Colonel (and Walter O'Hara, president of the track, stands shoulder to shoulder with him on this matter) insists that the betting public be protected with racing which, like the wife of Caesar and Fuzzy Joe, should be above suspicion.

"I don't care who wins," said O'Hara the other day. "It doesn't make any difference to the track whether a favorite or a long shot comes in, because the track collects seven and one-half of the total amount of money bet. But I shall and do insist that the public be protected."

The Mikel horses, though, are strange creatures. Last Wednesday his Fred Almy, with Tommy King up, beat horses like Moane Keala and Cantersine, winning by a length in a half and covering the six furlongs in 1 11 3, which is three-fifths of a second behind the track record.

EXPLAIN THIS, MR. MIKEL

Last Saturday, the same horse ran in a race won by Mrs. Sheldon Fairbanks' Old Baldy in 1 13. Fred Almy was a mere seven and a half lengths behind Old Baldy, finishing fifth in a field of six.

The peculiar part is this: Last Wednesday, Fred Almy paid slightly more than 8-1, but last Saturday, he was a 4 5 favorite. Perhaps Mr. Mikel can explain such startling inconsistency, and perhaps the stewards can explain something about the inner workings of a horse's mind.

Then about this rough little King boy. He was aboard Flag Time last Wednesday, and did the most brutal job that Jockey D. Egan has ever seen on a track, not 20 yards away from the stewards' stands, but there was no disqualification.

On Saturday, he gave Fred Almy a ride which was—now let me dust off my adjectives—atrocious, unaccountable, and even asinine though that is a word which belongs peculiarly to Steward Benjamin Ladd (Yoicks) Cook, master of Terrydiddle.

King had his mount on the outside, where the footing was firm, and ducked inside, where the footing was heavier, for no reason at all. Last Wednesday, when he won on Fred Almy, he was on the outside all the way around the track.

"What are you going to do about that ride?" he asked Steward S. C. Nuckols, the only steward in the stand at the time.

"We are not making any statements," said Mr. Nuckols, with all the dignity which he could command.

HE WAS NOT MAKING ANY STATEMENTS ABOUT A FAVORITE WHICH HAD BEEN GIVEN A FROWSY RIDE. HE DID NOT WISH TO SAY ANYTHING ABOUT A HORSE ON WHICH MORE THAN $12,000 OF THE $27,000 WIN POOL WAS WAGERED.

PUBLIC PAYS THE BILLS

These stewards act as if they are on a vacation, which George Brown, Jr. and Benjamin Ladd (Yoicks) Cook undoubtedly are.

The public pays the bills in the last analysis, and is entitled to protection.

So each and every race follower is entitled to ask: What is this strange power which Mikel and King hold over the stewards?

A Lochinvar Rides Out o' the West to Pawtucket Triumphs

Jockey E. Arcaro is rapidly establishing himself as one of the leading riders at the Narragansett meeting, adding to his fame by riding to victory in the double feature on Saturday. He piloted Hadagal to an easy victory in the Governor Green Handicap and then brought Thomasville, a 12 to 1 shot home matched card here this afternoon.

HEADLEY ENTRY, SAND CLOUD, BEST BET

In taking the son of High Cloud and Sandy Lane, I'll be asking him to reverse the tables on Westy's Duke, which drubbed him at five and one-half furlongs in their last meeting.

However, Westy's Duke was all out in that affair to stave off the late stretch run of Sand Cloud and would have been beaten in a few more strides.

In today's affair Sand Cloud will be favored by a [illegible] shift in weight in addition to a distance that should prove to his liking. With those conditions in his favor, it looks as though he can hardly lose it off.

Earl Steffen, one of the better pigskin booters, is slated to have the leg up this making Sand Cloud's chances all the brighter.

FIRST RACE

Sand Cloud, Westy's Duke, Strolling Miss

If any [illegible] upset my [illegible] this affair it will be WESTY'S DUKE, which mastered Sand Cloud in his last outing. Westy's Duke has a high turn of speed and is capable of upsetting the calculations providing nothing carries him along in the early stages. STROLLING MISS was beaten off four and one-half lengths by the top pair in her last outing. That was her first effort in more than a month, and there is every reason to believe she will improve.

SECOND RACE

Heedless Gal, Sun Cloister, Rose Hazen

Under the light impost of 108 pounds HEEDLESS GAL should prove the one to graduate in this affair. The F. A. Griffin-owned [illegible] has [illegible] run back to any of her good races over this course in order to cop the [illegible]. SUN CLOISTER, the more dangerous of the contenders, is away down on the also eligible list and may not get a chance to start. In his last race, he finished in front of the top one. However, that effort had a certain tinge of luck to it as Sun Cloister beat the gate by many lengths. ROSE HAZEN, hasn't shown much in his races, but the work tab suggests that he is ready for startling improvement.

THIRD RACE

Hermie Boy, Dornock, Flying Don

HERMIE BOY has only to run his excellent morning trials in order to lead this ordinary pack under the imaginary wire. The Calumet colorbearer has been running over his head in recent races and those efforts may be disregarded. Several days ago he made the work watchers sit up and take notice when he worked a handy six furlongs in 1 13. That sort of running should earn him the major award. DORNOCH has turned in several excellent performances over the course and looks next best. FLYING ON, which was slated to perform today, should have little trouble in saving the short end of the spoils.

FOURTH RACE

Surveyor, Minnant, Lisa Belle

SURVEYOR is a highly regarded colt in the C. V. Whitney Stable which accounted for a stake at the Pimlico spring meeting. He received his preparation at Saratoga and shipped over here as fit as hands can make him. SURVEYOR'S [illegible] start at Saratoga was his first since his spring campaign and may be disregarded. MINNANT looms as strictly the one to speed to graduate from the ranks of the maidens in her first start and looms as strictly the one to drub. LISA BELLE ran a smashing race to finish second to Blast Furnace in her last outing after breaking slowly.

FIFTH RACE

Elf Lock, Flying Cadet, Red John

ELF LOCK strikes me as holding a decided edge in this affair. A repetition of her second to Carry Over earlier in the meeting would likely result in her reaching the winner's circle. FLYING CADET, a steady going sort, has been dropped back among his own kind and figures to offer the more stern contention. RED JOHN closed with a rush in his last outing and looks next best.

SIXTH RACE

Stepbrother, Fast Move, Flowery

STEPBROTHER finished second to Cold Spill last out. To my way of thinking he would have never been beaten in that affair had he received a more intelligent ride. [illegible] Chanove made the mistake of laying too close to the early pace in that affair. FAST MOVE was third behind Mild and Pennywise in track record time last out. With nothing as formidable as the above pair in this affair, he should prove all dangerous. FLOWERY has been running right to the hickory and should save the minor award providing he is sent right back.

SEVENTH RACE

Kibitzer, Brass Monkey, Boy Crazy

KIBITZER came up a good thing last out to trim a much stronger field than this, but finished third behind Scotch Soldier and Frair Mark. That was Kibitzer's first start since the Rockingham Park session and he was undoubtedly dead short. BRASS MONKEY is well suited by the distance and will be running strongly during the late stages. BOY CRAZY is at tops and looks next best.

It is the contacting of a long down trend line running from the February tops down through the high of April. This time the rails are moving up in more reassuring fashion, but as yet have failed to show a determination to reverse a down trend of many months' standing.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

Hornblower & Weeks—The outstanding development marketwise the past week was the absorption of all offerings around the high levels of mid-August with the movement into new high ground accompanied by an expansion in activity on the up side. Hence, we will not want to ignore the possible significance of the ability of the market to overcome previous resistance levels, which is an event strongly suggestive of the start of a new forward movement of importance.

Clark, Childs & Co.—The stock market is at present discounting the bullish factors. It will probably hold up for a while based on those factors—but the adverse elements are too strong to warrant believing the clear sailing is ahead. Accordingly a position on the sidelines for those interested in stocks on other than a short term trading view, continues to appear advisable for the present.

Paine, Webber & Co.—Although the upturn may meet temporary resistance at nearby levels, a reaction of any importance is unlikely.

G. M.-P. Murphy & Co.—Undoubtedly an influence against profit taking was the expectation of week-end news of stimulating nature from Washington. Failure of such news to develop may produce realizing today, but unless sales are accompanied by real activity, a decline should not make much headway.

U. S. FINANCING IS STUDIED BY EXPERT

In the next two months the government will borrow nearly two billions of dollars. This Federal financing, a dominant factor in banking, the investment markets and business, is explained in a series of three articles by M. L. Ramsay, Universal Service specialist on financial and economic subjects. The first article, which follows, deals with the probable scope of the financing and its important bearing on the currency policy. Following articles written especially for the Boston Evening American will tell how the financing will be done and describe the unparalleled influence it will exert on the lives of Americans through the banks, insurance companies, corporations and private investors.

BY M. L. RAMSAY

Washington, Aug. 27—In busy [illegible] experts on budgets [illegible] are shaping plans for [illegible] Sam to borrow next month and in October at least 1,770 million dollars and probably some hundreds of millions more.

As they plan currency inflation is hushed. Silver is pushed into the background. Further dollar devaluation is considered, if at all, [illegible] measure that must wait.

Seven million dollars of government gold that no American could buy, beg or borrow moves out [illegible] New York [illegible] Europe [illegible] to see [illegible]

Fluctuations in government [illegible]

[illegible] with temporary but imperative outlays for relief and recovery. As the President puts it "Immeasurable benefits justify the cost." And the securities which finance these outlays have been bought by the orthodox bankers, in prodigious [illegible]

Lately, however, for a brief period, banks and investors became less eager, and got their government bonds and notes at lower prices. Some said this was due to inflation fears. Others said "jitters."

The Treasury is virtually certain to refund, on September 15, $524,748,000 of maturing treasury certificates. It is expected also to offer new securities in exchange for about half of 1246 million dollars of Fourth Liberty Loan bonds which become payable on October 15. The other half would be refunded in October.

Probably Secretary Morgenthau will borrow some money to cover the deficit which has grown, since July 1, to $388,000,000. But he still has from last year's 2500 million dollar general fund balance a vast store of cash. He could wait a while.

His decision in the next week or [illegible] go far towards shaping the course of banking and the investment markets, built largely nowadays on government credit.

(The second article of this series will be published tomorrow.)

DOLLAR STAGES BRISK RALLY

New York, Aug. 27 (INS)—Responding to the steady outflow of gold last week, the dollar staged a vigorous rally today with the rate recovering to 58.84 cents in terms of the French franc against [illegible]74 cents on Saturday.

British sterling however continued its decline against the dollar with the rate falling another nine-sixteenths of a cent to $5.06-3-16. In Paris sterling was steady at 75-¾ francs to the pound.

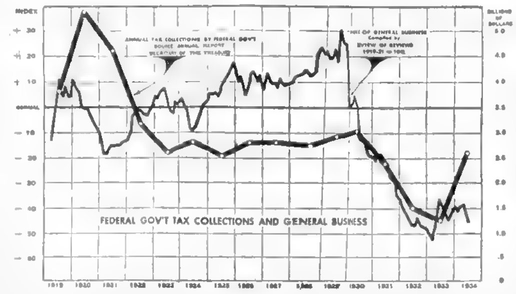
European gold currencies were uniformly easier in favor of the dollar. French francs dropped 1⅜ points to 6.68 cents, Belgian belgas 4 to 23.80, Swiss francs 4 to 33.10 and Dutch guilders 8 to 68.72.

German marks suffered [illegible] sinking spell, apparently [illegible] over the week-end statements of Finance Minister Schacht regarding Germany's ability to maintain her debt service charges, and dropped 28 points to 39.58 cents. Italian lire declined 1¼ points to 8.70, and Spanish pesetas 3 to 13.85.

Cotton Steady in New York Dealings

New York, Aug. 27 (AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, 4 to 7 down in response to lower Liverpool cables and the unfavorable textile strike outlook. October 1[illegible]14, December 13.30, January 13.34, March 13.42; May 13.52; July 13.60.

Federal Tax Collections



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

There is a rough and logical correlation between business activity and the revenue of the federal government. Prosperity brings with it an increase in foreign trade, and this means larger imports and a greater volume of customs receipts. The incomes of corporations rise and the government finds its revenue from that source increasing. As business prospers, profits and dividends increase, and again Uncle Sam steps in to share the income with the private individual.

The unfortunate part of this relation between government revenues and the course of business is that the needs of the state tend to increase as business declines and to decrease as business improves. This is due to the progress of the new conviction that it is the duty of the state not only to protect and maintain order but also to provide for the distress of its citizens.

As a result, when the ranks of the unemployed increase in periods of business depression the task of taking care of them devolve upon the Government. In similar fashion, it is called upon to provide relief in goods and in cash to families without support, and come to the aid of particular and socially vital industries which require assistance such as construction and agriculture.

It is probably that the line of governmental revenue in the future will be complicated by additional considerations. First of all, we have the processing tax levied on behalf of the farmer which will run into hundreds of millions of dollars. This is a special form of excise tax in its incidence and effect upon the producer not unlike the tariff. However, it is hardly to be considered true government revenue since it has already been allocated to the farmer.

Another item that will confuse the picture is the growing belief among liberals that the taxing power of the Government should be used to redistribute wealth. Obviously, to the extent that it serves this purpose, revenue again ceases to become solely the support of the Government for its ordinary duties.

Boston Wool Market Found Less Active

The wool market in Boston has [illegible] been quite as active as during the previous week. Nevertheless, sentiment showed a tendency toward a slight improvement, and though sales were too light to test quotations, other developments had an influence in stimulating a more confident attitude of some members of the trade.

Inquiries were recieved on several grades of fleeces but they did not result in sales. The medium grades were mentioned most frequently by houses receiving the inquiries.

Graded territory wools were very quiet. A few inquiries were received on spot Texas wools, but little was [illegible] out of the market where around 70c, scoured basis, was asked for good twelve months staple. Small quantities of twelve months wools offered direct from Texas were reported to have been sold at around 60c, scoured basis, delivered east, for the shorter wools. It was reported that limited quantities of the better staple wools were available from Texas at around 63-65c, scoured basis, delivered.

The principal interest in foreign wools was in the opening sales of the season in Brisbane, Australia. Prices at Brisbane were higher than had been expected, in view of the lack of support from continental European buyers. While prices reported by cables to private concerns in Boston were somewhat irregular, the showing at the Brisbane opening was widely considered in this market to compare favorably with the closing of the July sales in London, especially when developments following the London sale in markets abroad and the character of offerings at Brisbane are considered.

Demand for wool tops was very limited and was confined largely to covering only the most urgent immediate requirements. Much of this demand was filled by odds and ends of spot tops that were available at very irregular prices. There was almost a total absence of contracting for future requirements. A few inquiries were made but these did not result in buyers making definite commitments. Buyers generally were waiting for developments in the goods market. Current requirements for tops were [illegible] from deliveries on old contracts which were taken in slightly larger volume by some spinners. The aggregate volume of deliveries, however, continued very light.

Member Loans 5 P. C. Down in Week

Debits to individual accounts, as reported to Federal Reserve Board by banks in leading cities for the week ended August 22, aggregated $6,282,000,000, or 5 per cent below preceding week and 7 per cent above corresponding week last year.

Aggregate debits for 141 cities for which a separate total has been maintained since January, 1919, were $5,851,000,000, against $6,152,000,000 the preceding week and $5,493,000,000 last year.

MIXED TONE IN BOSTON MART

An irregular tone marked Boston Stock Exchange dealings today. Trading was quiet and price changes confined mostly to fractions.

Swift International was up nearly 2 and First National Stores gained a [illegible] fraction as did United Shoe preferred. Maine Central was narrowly higher.

American Telephone, Pennsylvania Railroad, Kennecott, United Shoe and Utah Metal were easy.

Statement of Pennsylvania Railroad as of June 30, 1934, filed with New York State Public Service Commission, shows total assets of $2,229,686,536, against $2,203,593,919 on June 30, 1933. Profit and loss surplus was $212,345,207, against $205,606,638.

Small Demand for Liverpool Cotton

Liverpool, Aug. 27 (INS)—There was a limited demand for opening spots on the Liverpool cotton market today. Prices were steady and receipts totaled 2000 bales, none of which was American.

At noon middling fair was 8.16d, strictly good middling 7.71d, good middling 7.41d, strictly middling 7.26d, middling 7.11d, strictly low middling 6.96d, low middling 6.76d, strictly good ordinary 6.56d and good ordinary 6.26d.

Futures opened quiet and steady and at noon were unchanged to 1 point lower than initial quotations and 1 to 4 points below due prices. October opened at 6.88d, January 6.86d, March 6.86d and May 6.86d.

Improved Tone in Business Trend Found in Survey

According to Dun & Bradstreet trade in many divisions took a decided turn for the better during the past week, and there was a strong revival of sentiment regarding a more vigorous expansion of Fall business than appeared to be in prospect a month ago.

The farming districts are in a more cheerful mood, and the outcome of harvesting, now in full swing, is running ahead of the quotas set, even in the drouth-stricken States.

Fall trade may be late in getting into full stride, but the buying movement gives promise of developing to a greater degree of intensity than last year, and its continuance over a more protracted period will leave less of a gap before the commencement of the Winter season.

The impressive totals recorded for distribution during the ordinarily dull Summer months have supplied convincing evidence of substantial business recovery, which has been attended by industrial expansion sufficiently broad to impart a spirit of confidence in the further improvement of consumptive requirements during the balance of the year.

Conclusive proof of the lessening of apprehension on the part of the general public, which again has money and the inclination to indulge in recreation to a moderate degree, is attested by the widest increase in pleasure travel since 1930.

The more generous release of funds for the Federal home-renovation program, which is proceeding quietly but rapidly, has broadened hopes for the long-awaited revival of the building trades.

The completion of preliminary details, relative to the modernization credit section of the National Housing Act, has placed at the disposal of the public more than a thousand banks in forty-six States that now are co-operating in making loans for such improvements.

The majority of the strikes also have been settled, and the interest which the Government is taking in dispelling the threats of outbreaks during the next month gives hope that the strike wave may be definitely on the ebb.

The reports on retail distribution this week provided a basis for more encouragement than at any time since last April, as the rise above the abnormally expanded total of a year ago is placed conservatively at 5 to 10 per cent.

Sales in most parts of the middle west have taken a sharp turn for the better, helped by rains, cooler temperatures, and the bolstering assurance that the devastation of the drouth is less severe.

On the Pacific coast, the reopening of mills and factories, forced to close during the longshoremen's strike, and the hectic shipping activity to clear accumulated cargo, have restored volume above last year's level.

The leading industrial indices this week reveal a steadier trend than had been expected for the summer-end period. Electric output increased 0.9 per cent for the week and rose to within striking distance of the year's peak, touched at the close of July.

While the gain over 1933 was reduced from 1.9 to 1.5 per cent, with one exception the figures have exceeded the comparative ones of the year preceding for the 67th successive week.

Southwest Light Pays 50 Cents

Southwestern Light & Power Co. declared a dividend of 50 cents on the $6 cumulative preferred stock, payable October 1 to stock of record September 15. Similar dividends have been paid in previous four quarters.

SIGNS OF TRADE PICKUP THIS AUTUMN

By B. C. FORBES

The traditional summer "slump" has been experienced.

But there are incipient indications that business promises to become better after Labor Day.

B. C. Forbes

Economic developments have been as mixed as sentiment, just as some are optimistic and some pessimistic, so some industries are doing better, others distinctly worse.

For example, steel operations have climbed to 22 per cent, yet electric output shows better than seasonal gains. July and August have brought shrinkage in employment; commercial failures are the lowest in 14 years. Automobile exports are fully 150 per cent ahead of last year, latest railway income figures show a drop of 44 per cent. Wholesale prices have soared higher than at any time in fully three years, stock transactions are the slimmest in a dozen years. Bank clearings show up better than business activity had foreshadowed.

The PWA has granted well over a quarter billion dollars for power projects, but industrial borrowers have been able to qualify for only a picayune amount of federal reserve lendings. Despite the drouth the AAA calls for 15 per cent crop reduction during the coming year, at an estimated cost in excess of $100,000,000. Washington is buying silver freely and shipping gold abroad.

While one arm of the federal government rejoices in a rise in the cost of living (including skyrocketing prices for pork) another [illegible] bringing about any increase in the cost of living. Cotton growers who hocked their production at ten cents a pound are now informed by a generous Washington that they can have two cents more per pound; cotton manufacturers, who already were compelled to raise wages and cut working hours drastically, have been ordered to boost wages ten per cent more and cut hours another ten per cent, a decree not calculated to keep down prices of textiles to consumers.

Meanwhile labor troubles are breaking out and still more extensive strikes are threatened.

Industry is evidencing more determination to fight arbitrary labor rulings by bureaucrats. A final showdown on the constitutionality of such rulings has not yet materialized. Thus far, the highest authorities at Washington have evinced little readiness to hasten submission of their acts to the United States Supreme Court.

Throughout the business and industrial worlds apprehension has become more pronounced. Little comfort has been derived from President Roosevelt's utterances. New enterprise is more conspicuous by its absence than its presence. Hence the shrinkage in employment.

The pessimism current in influential circles has not been fully reflected by security quotations because of growing expectations that inflation cannot be avoided if the government persists in vast expenditures for a wide variety of purposes. Speculators are again showing interest.

Through the newly organized American Liberty League business and industry plan to come out into the open in opposition to presidential policies they regard as subversive to stability, prosperity, property rights and productive employment.

The writer inclines to the belief that pessimism concerning the outlook for business during the final third of the year is being overdone.

Washington may decide shortly to encourage confidence.

SHARE PRICES EASY IN DULL TRADING

New York, Aug. 27—Weakness in the commodity markets combined with profit taking brought an easier tone in the stock market today where losses ran to more than a point.

The vigorous rally in the dollar induced considerable selling in the gold shares with United States Smelting, Alaska Juneau and American Smelting dipping a point or more.

MOTORS EASY

Chrysler was the weak spot in the auto shares losing nearly a point, while General Motors and Auburn suffered slightly smaller losses.

U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and the other industrial shares did little and held fractionally under yesterday's closing levels.

Chemicals were adversely influenced by the easiness in Allied Chemical. Oils continued to mark time with Standard Oil of New Jersey, and Consolidated steady.

Profit taking also was evident in the rail shares where New York Central, Atchison, Southern Railway and Southern Pacific declined fractionally in the face of the filing of a plea for a freight rate increase running to 15 per cent on some commodities. In the commodity markets wheat and the other grains lost fractionally, and cotton dipped about 30 cents a bale.

TRADE GAINS CHEER

Reports of gains in retail trade cheered Wall Street as it entered the final week of August. Hopes were high that improvement would broaden out after Labor Day and bring a revival in production following the summer lull.

The magazine Steel commented that the industry was waiting Labor Day in expectation that it would mark the turning point in the seasonal slump.

"Belief is strong," it added, "that the coming month will bring considerable improvement in spot orders for completing present manufacturing programs and in contracting for fall requirements."

It estimated steel operations last week were down one point to 20½ per cent of capacity.

Additional July railroad earnings statements emphasized the trend toward a decline in net income out of proportion to smallr gross as a result of higher operating costs.

The pound opened here at $5.06 3-16, off 7-16 of a cent. The franc was off .00½ of a cent at 6.68 cents.

STEADY TONE IN BOND MART

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 27—The Bond market was generally steady in the early trading today. Trading proceeded at a comparatively fast pace during the first hour and fractional gains came into evidence in a number of instances.

The speculative rail group again assumed leadership of the market. St. Paul 5s advanced ¼ to 32½ and the adjustments ⅜ to 10⅛. Chicago & North Western convertible 4¾s were up ⅝ at 31¼.

High grade rails, utilities, and industrials were steady.

Coca-Cola Net Earnings Gain

Coca-Cola Co. reports for quarter ended June 30, 1934, net profit of $4,308,572 after charges and federal taxes, equivalent after allowing for dividend requirements on the $3 class A stock, to $3.80 a share on 1,000,000 shares of common stock. This compares with $2,208,164, or $1.70 a share on common in preceding quarter and $3,354,573, or $2.85 a share in June quarter of previous year.

For six months ended June 30, 1934, net profit was $6,516,736 after charges and taxes, equal to $5.50 a share on the common against $5,160,791, or $4.15 a share in first half of 1933. The regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 was declared on the common stock, payable October 1 to stock of record September 12.

Output Unchanged in Youngstown

Operations of steel mills in the Youngstown district this week will hold unchanged at 21 per cent of capacity, with no prospect of a gain or loss of any extent until after Labor Day.

Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. will suspend production of ingots this week in the Mahoning Valley, its Campbell open-hearth department and Bessemer going down, not to start again until September 3. Operations, measured by ingot output, thus will be at zero compared with 46 per cent in like week last year, 15 per cent two years ago, and 30 per cent three years ago.

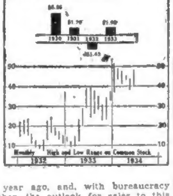
Underwood Elliott Has Earnings Increase

Analysis Prepared by the Fitch Investors' Service

The profit of 96 cents per share on the common stock during the second 1934 quarter as compared with 99 cents in the first quarter and 95 cents in the last 1933 quarter reflects both well maintained earning power and a better than seasonal experience in the latest period. Thus, despite the recent letdown in general business, it appears reasonable to anticipate profits for 1934 of around $4 per share. This would compare with $1.99 earned in 1933 and would be the highest since 1930, when $5.47 a share was earned. On this basis stock at current levels has yet to discount its relatively favorable long-term prospects, assuming of course that industry will resume a forward march this fall.



FEDERAL BUUREACRACY AIDING CO.

Sales to the government are said to be running considerably ahead of a year ago, and, with bureaucracy likely to expand still further, the outlook for sales to this source seems fairly good. Because of the slackening in trade recently, the outlook for sales to private sources would seem uncertain offhand. However, with higher costs besetting industry, the pressure for greater efficiency should provide a worthwhile stimulus. Dollar depreciation is a continuing aid in connection with foreign volume.

This company, with its subsidiaries, represents the consolidation of several leading concerns manufacturing office equipment and supplies. Produces "Underwood Standard" and "Noiseless" typewriters, also "Elliott-Fisher" accounting and writing machines, and "Sundstrand" adding-calculating machines, Neidich ribbons and carbon paper, automatic bookkeeping machines and cash registers. A number of new models were brought out in 1932, including a noiseless portable typewriter, an inexpensive junior portable, and other radically improved office machines.

STRONG FINANCIAL POSITION

Capitalization is represented by preferred stock, 7 per cent cumulative, $100 par (callable at 125), 27,050 shares. Common stock (no par), 666,448 shares. There is no funded debt.

Financial condition as of December 31, 1933, was strong, with current ratio better than 12 to 1, and cash alone about 4½ times current liabilities.

Crown Zellerbach Profit

Crown Zellerbach Corporation reports consolidated net profit, after deducting interests of minority stockholders, for the three months ended July 31, 1934, of $267,182, equivalent to $1.06 per share on the 250,601 shares of preference stocks, Series A and B outstanding.

This compares with earnings of $326,409, or $1.30 per share, in the corresponding period of 1933.

Housing Act Discussed

Despite the measures taken by the administration to provide additional money for building purposes no marked improvement in the building industry is likely to occur, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

With building costs so high, the measures taken by the government to make money available promise to provide little stimulation, although some people who do not recognize the poorness of such an investment may be tempted to borrow.

Penn Water Pays Usual

Directors of Pennsylvania Water & Power Company have declared the usual quarterly dividends of 75 cents per share on the common and $1.25 per share on the preferred stock payable October 1, 1934, to stockholders of record September 15, 1934.

CURB MARKET IS IRREGULAR

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 27—The Curb market displayed nervous irregularity in early dealings today, with minor price declines in many of last week's favorites nullifying further gains recorded in a handful of issues.

Utilities encountered dribbling offerings, with Electric Bond and Share off ¼ at 12⅛; and United Gas down ⅛ at 2¼.

Aluminum was a weak spot in the specialties, droping 2 points to 9⅛. Nominal losses were sustained in Sift and Company and Swift International, while fractional gains were credited to American Cyanamid B, Ford, Ltd., and Glen Alden Coal.

Metals were in supply, Lake Shore declining ½ to 56, and Pioneer dropping ⅛ to 13⅛.

WHEAT EXPORTS ARE LOWER

Exports of wheat, including flour as wheat, from United States and Canadian ports, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended August 18, 1934, totalled 3,864,462 bushels, as compared with 4,081,280 bushels in the previous week and 3,793,514 bushels in the corresponding week of last year.

For the season, July 1 to date, wheat exports aggregated 22,989,166 bushels as against 22,206,664 bushels for the same period a year ago.

Corn exports for this week were nil, compared with none in the preceding week and none last year. For the season, corn exports totalled 1,000 bushels, as against 19,000 bushels for the like period in the previous year.

Otis Steel Co. to Make Payment

New York, Aug. 27—Otis Steel Co., it was announced today, will pay Sept. 1, 1933, coupons on its 6 per cent sinking fund mortgage bonds on next Sept. 1. The last payment was made on June 18, 1934, when semi-annual interest for march, 1933, was paid.

Canadian Business Activity Greater

Although characterized by a degree of mid-summer slackness, business in Canada is on a higher general level than a year ago, says the Bank of Montreal in its current business summary. The demand for capital goods has not yet begun to follow that for consumption goods with anything approaching the same degree of buoyancy, but general scale of production has been well maintained.

The outlook for Canada compares favorably with that of most commercial countries at the present season, says the report. Hope of a bountiful harvest, however, is not to be realized. Taking the Dominion as a whole, crops promise to equal, perhaps exceed, those of last year, though prolonged drouth over large areas in the western and central provinces has retarded growth and reduced production.

All indices of trade reveal improvement over last year, some over conditions of two years ago. To August 11, carloads were 217,229 cars in excess of 1933 and 49,414 cars in excess of 1932.

Retail business is experiencing mid-summer quiet and has not been helped appreciably by tourist traffic, which is light. Mining operations continue on a large scale, especially in the gold fields and several new gold mines have recently reached production stage. The lumber industry maintains the improvement of recent months, notably in the export trade. News print production is still running well ahead of last year.

Bank Resources Gain

The 300 largest American banks having trust powers reported banking resources as of June 30 aggregating $27,082,068,000, or a gain of approximately 8.97 per cent, over the amount credited to these same institutions at the end of 1933, according to a tabulation appearing in the current issue of Trust Companies Magazine.

Total banking resources of these banks by the usual geographical divisions (rather than by Federal Reserve districts), with percentage increase over December, were reported as follows:

	Total Resources (in thousands)	% Increase Over Dec. 1933
New England	$1,888,282	6.0
Middle Atlantic	13,531,746	8.2
East North Central	4,089,033	13.4
West North Central	1,382,829	14.0
South Atlantic	1,209,830	9.9
East South Central	502,960	5.7
West South Central	796,060	11.7
Rocky Mountain	224,135	7.5
Pacific	3,367,193	6.2

Automobile Production

Automobile production in the United States and Canada in July, amounting to 277,689 cars and trucks, declined 13.7 per cent from June and was 17.7 per cent above July, 1933, according to reports on factory sales to the Department of Commerce. In June, output was 25.2 per cent above last year.

July production was 89.36 per cent of the average output for the month in the preceding 12 years, while June was at 92.86 per cent of the 12-year average. The high ratio for the year to date on this basis was 97.91 per cent in March.

Bangor & Aroostook Loss

A deficit of $138,747 in July net income was reported by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad. The deficit compared with a deficit of $133,901 for July, 1933. Gross revenues for the month were $213,817 as against $197,475 for July, 1933.

Wrigley Dividends

William Wrigley, Jr., Co. announces that dividends have been declared as follows: 25 cents per share payable November 1, 1934; 25 cents per share payable December 1, 1934, to holders of record on the 20th day of each preceding month.

FAILURES ARE AT NEW LOW

In no full week this year or for many years past has the number of business failures in the United States been as low as that shown this week. The records of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., show 197 such defaults for the week ended Thursday, August 16. In the two weeks preceding there were, respectively, 209 and 220 failures reported, while for the same week a year ago the number was 312.

In the short week this year, which included Independence Day, there were 181 insolvencies recorded, but that was the only week, prior to the past one, since the last week of September, 1920, that the number of such defaults in any one week was below 200.

Business failures at this time of the year usually are at the low point as far as the number is concerned, but so far this month the reduction from the earlier months of the year has been somewhat more marked than is usually the case.

The decline from the preceding week was mainly in the South and the West. Fewer failures were also reported in the East. The number of failures with liabilities of $5000 and over was 130, against 139 last week and 201 a year ago.

Insolvencies in the Dominion of Canada were also very much less in number the past week, totalling 19, against 26 the preceding week and 40 for the corresponding period in 1933.

Cotton Payments Total $38,114,245

Rental payments to cotton farmers co-operating in the 1934 creage adjustment program totaled $38,114,245 on Aug. 16, 1934, the last date on which a county-by-county complication was made, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced today.

This money, paid out in 1,039,125 checks, is part of the first rental payment of approximately $50,000,000 which is now being made to cotton farmers. As soon as it is completed and compliance with the cotton acreage reduction contract has been certified, payment of a second installment of $50,000,000 will begin.

In ddition to approximately $100,000,000 in rental payments, cotton farmers next December will receive a parity payment totaling approximately $25,000,000.

Loft Reports Net Sales of $6,312,854

Loft, Inc., reports for six months ended June 30, last, net sales of $6,312,854, against $6,184,026 in first half of 1933. For quarter ended June 30 net sales were $3,042,824, against $3,272,611 in June quarter of 1933.

JOE COOK IN RADIO TROUBADOUR ROLE TONIGHT

Comedian Out for New Mike Laurels

By N. F. T.

Nothing phases Joe Cook, he claims. Anything anyone else can do in front of or behind a microphone, Joe insists he can do. Singing ballads are not excepted, he maintains, adding "without due respect to McCormack, Bing Crosby, Lawrence Tibbett or even Rudy Vallee." Thus and so Joe has in mind to throw his voice to the four winds in song tonight (WEEI) on the stroke of 9:30 p. m.

AIR ACROBATICS ALSO

In addition, the inimitable Indiana native son is entering upon a strange brand of studio clowning the reason for which isn't very clearly understood. He plans spilling his monologue nonsense to the open spaces while balancing himself on a large ball of the type acrobats used when that sort of thing provoked applause.

Joe feels it will be quite a feat to run through his fast gabbing while preserving (maybe) his equilibrium in front of a stationary "mike" and perched atop the big revolving sphere. No doubt he will be putting on his program while walking a tight rope one of these not far distant Monday nights. Incidentally Joe is an accomplished slack wire stepper of the old vaudeville school.

That new "Summer Interlude" setting is worthy of a 9:30 to 10 o'clock (WNAC) indulgence this evening. Georgie Price would seem to be the principal reason, especially since he sends word he will sing "Pardon My Southern Accent" and "I Never Had a Chance" against a background of Lud Gluskin orchestra tempo.

BILLY BATCHELOR BACK

Tonight marks the return of Raymond Knight in his "Billy Batchelor" series of whimsical sketches (WEEI) between 6:45 and 7 p. m. Bobby Jordan and Emily Vass, the 11-year-old radio stars supporting Ray last season, likewise occupy their former prominent parts in the cast as "Peter" and "Pan." It's something totally different from Knight's burlesque "Cuckoos" broadcast. Moreover, it certainly gives the listener a far better all around impression of Ray as a personality than does the aforementioned so-called comedy.

Loudspeaker patrons who like detective doings for their dial diversion, should sit in on the "Raffles" 30 minutes (WNAC) this evening. "The Adventure of the Black Opal" duly affords adequate jewel thievery thrills throughout the theme. All of which by the way, is the 8:30 to 9 o'clock best bet methinks.

You Hear Him on the Radio

Tito Guizar . . . The hot tamale man . . . Who can't find any anywhere . . . At least not like mother used to make . . . Because Tito is from across the Rio Grande . . . In Guadelejara . . . And mother made them . . . They were hot tamales . . . And not just something as good . . . By that name.

Once a year does Tito go back home . . . Just to find tamales that are real . . . And he deserts radio . . . And record-making . . . And all else . . . For this pursuit of happiness . . . At least once a year.

Tito was born in Mexico . . . Which you may have judged . . . And studied medicine . . . At Mexico City . . . Leaving his father alone . . . To plunk his facile guitar . . . At Guadelajara . . . Where Daddy Guizar was a hot guitarist.

Instead of dissecting . . . And also bisecting . . . Tito devoted himself with more interest to music . . . To the entertainment of the medical students . . . Until the rumors got to Dad . . . And the pater agreed that the science of ectomy was the wrong lane . . . And that Tito should go to Italy . . . To study music . . . Which Tito did . . . Gladly . . . And returned in 1929 . . . To make a huge musical debut in a series of Mexican operas.

But Tito . . . Good readers . . . Cared not a whit for opera . . . And he took up the matter of Mexican folk song . . . Oh yes, Mexicans have folk songs . . . And he went deep into the matter . . . And was asked to print them . . . On undying master records . . . And radio followed in due course . . . And now you dial Tito . . . And are glad to do it.

This lad is the true insurance build . . . standing five feet 10 inches . . . And weighing 165 pounds . . . With a voice intriguing.

TITO GUIZAR

By Associated Press

Kansas City, Aug. 27—Local offices of Transcontinental and Western Air said today no word had been received from their mail plane reported missing between Amarillo, Tex., and Albuquerque, N. M.

Captain Fleet, 34, formerly of Yalesville, Conn., was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., he was educated in Meriden, Conn. He joined the United States army in 1918.

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION
BY MORE THAN 80,000

Stop Criminals' Easy Securing of Arms

THE public press and the magazines have published numerous dispatches and articles recently which indicate that many people are vastly stirred up over reported activities of the munitions makers.

It is more than hinted that the munitions makers abroad have fostered warfare.

One thing that CAN be fastened on the munitions makers without fear of successful contradiction is disregarded.

This is the promiscuous selling of machine guns. And for this condition the LEGISLATORS, who are entrusted with the making of NEEDED laws, are also LARGELY TO BLAME.

The latest example of machine gun misuse was in the Brooklyn holdup, the greatest in history, when $427,950 was the bandits' loot.

A half dozen sub-machine guns were used. Without them, it is unlikely the robbery could have been executed. Certainly it couldn't have been carried out with such speed, such smooth precision.

Sub-machine guns are made in this country.

They have a legitimate use in the hands of the regular army and national guard, the State and local police forces, and perhaps the private guards and watchmen of large industrial plants, banks, etc.

In any other hands they are merely first aid to crime.

You don't take one with you when you go out for a day of bird or rabbit or deer shooting.

SOMETIME, therefore, it may dawn on the legislators of the United States that the manufacture and sale of these guns without the strictest kind of Federal regulation is a menace to law and order.

It would seem worth while to attempt to trace all sub-machine guns manufactured in the United States in recent years, beginning at the factories, and all imported from abroad, beginning at the points of importation.

Such a census would throw much-needed light on the business as it is now practiced.

It would seem worth while also to install a rigorous system of registration and record-keeping for guns manufactured or imported in future and to require heavy bonds from all private individuals or companies that buy them.

At present, any little two-for-a-nickel gangster can have his "tommy gun," and usually does. When it's so easy to get, he thinks he'd be a fool if he didn't.

Helps Home Owners

It is nice to be able to sit down and type a kind word for bankers these days when one of the more popular indoor games is swatting the fellow who takes care of our money.

Especially Massachusetts bankers who accomplished a mighty creditable job when conditions elsewhere were not all that they might have been.

Then again those vigorous critics who contend that bankers are neither in sympathy with nor anxious to further administration aims are sure to be confounded.

The Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League, under the direction of President Raymond P. Harold, has established a special committee on Home Repairs and Modernization.

Its aim is to co-operate with the Federal Housing Administration in furnishing information and aid to home owners who seek improvement loans.

An altogether laudable plan. And Mr. Harold and the bankers he represents are to be congratulated on furnishing a service sure to be of big help to the man-on-the-street.

So if you are perplexed, bewildered and rather uncertain as to how to obtain a loan to improve your property, step down to the League's office at 80 Federal street, Boston.

We are sure you will receive a courteous reception and a satisfactory answer to your problems.

Taxation of Autos

The International News Service recently made public statistics gathered by the Automobile Club of New York, showing that the average American motorist pays 223 per cent of the value of his car in special taxes.

Our buyers of used cars in hundreds of cases pay double, treble and quadruple their cost merely to go through the necessary process for putting them on the highways.

Automobiles on the highways mean business for many establishments, more profits and increased employment.

When our legislators finally come to realize that, it is certain the heavy burden on motorists will be lightened.

Safeguarding Votes

Realizing that the coming primaries will be amongst the most important elections ever conducted in Massachusetts—especially in view of the contest between former Mayor Curley and General Cole, Boston's election commissioners last week began an examination of all of the city's 2200 polling place officials.

This rather unusual procedure might well be made a regular affair. Nothing can be more important than that election officials be properly instructed as to their duties.

It is a better safeguard for ballots than even policemen in the polling place. After all, they can only prevent violence and intimidation and the theft of ballot boxes—things that are happily becoming quite rare. But well-instructed officials can save the waste of many a ballot through improper marking.

Boston voters should appreciate the efforts of the Election Commission to do all in its power to enable the people to express their will and to see that it is recorded properly.

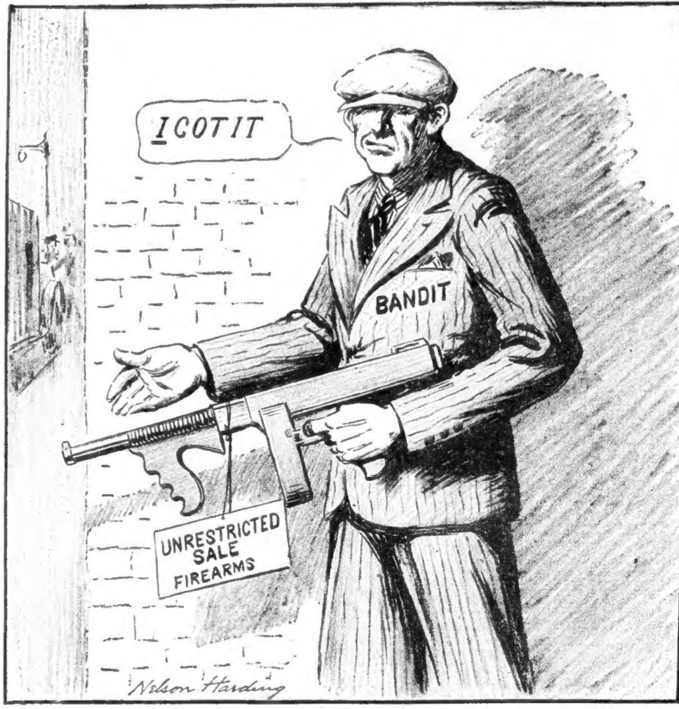
Weapons for Gangsters!



How does Crime's marauding army
Get possession of the weapons
That equip it for the warfare
Waged upon a plundered nation?

Whence the deadly sub-machine guns,
Modern instruments of terror?
Why does uncurbed, unrestricted
Sale of firearms continue?

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

"Come Down Thine Own Secret Stair!"

Elsie Robinson

You want things. So many things! Happiness—health—love—success—beauty—adventure—power—fun—wisdom—charm—

All these things you want, according to your nature. From the day you first shaped thought, you are filled with wants. No matter what you have, you are always wanting something more. No matter what you are doing outside, that cry for something more is going on inside.

And you pray. Not, perhaps, in set, religious phrases. You may, indeed, scorn prayer, deny the existence of God. Yet always you are reaching out toward some Invisible Source, asking for help. Asking for the things you want—wistfully, passionately.

SEEKING AN ANSWER

Always, too, you are seeking an answer for your need. You seek for answers in your home, in school, in business, in marriage, in work and play. And you are angry when you do not find the thing you want in the place where you seek. You are sure you should find it there—something's wrong if you don't. So you blame Society or Other People, or Fate, or God.

With the years the blaming and the bitterness increases. You decide that life's a mess. You lose faith in everything, everybody—begin to say cynical things. And you wonder if anyone else has ever felt as you do.

Of course they have. Every human being who dared to think deeply about life, dared to demand answers from life, has felt just as you are feeling. Cave men brooding in the steaming darkness of primeval jungles . . . savages, tenting in the vast loneliness of the desert, staring up at the silent, mocking stars . . . giants of industry sitting hunched and desperate over shining, mahogany desks in roaring skyscrapers . . . every woman who ever yearned desperately for the love of a man or the clutch of a baby's fingers . . . they have all thought as you are thinking.

Your prayer is part of one great common prayer that rises endlessly from Man to God.

Always men are wanting something—asking God for something—telling God exactly what they want, and how to do it.

Once the poet George MacDonald (who probably pestered God a good deal himself) told of that common prayer in a little poem of three verses which he called "That Holy Thing." He begins far back with the arrogant, desperate prayers that rose out of that world into which Jesus Christ was born—

LOOKING FOR KING

"They all were looking for a king
"To slay their foes and lift them high:
Thou cam'st? a little baby thing
"That made a woman cry."

Then he speaks of his own need—and his disappointment because he could not find the answer where he sought it—

"O Son of Man, to right my lot
"Naught but Thy presence can avail;
"Yet on the road Thy wheels are not,
"Nor, on the sea, Thy sail!"

And suddenly the truth comes to him and he tells how the Answer to all of us after our proud planning has failed—

"My how or when Thou wilt not heed
"But come down Thine own secret stair,
"That Thou mayst answer all my need—
"Yea, every bygone prayer."

Not in the proud trappings of royal success, nor on the flashing sails or the roaring wheels of reckless adventure comes the answer to our need—but in the quiet places of our daily lives, in the familiar tasks.

In those simple places and acts where we have never thought to seek happiness, wisdom and strength—"Down Thine own secret stair"—that is how help comes.

Split on Dancing -:- -:- By Winifred Black

The man and his wife were divorced this morning.

Winnifred Black

This afternoon they are going down into the country together to spend a few days with a mutual friend.

And the mutual friend doesn't know just what to do about it.

There is plenty of room in the mutual friend's house. There is the big bedroom with the old-fashioned honeysuckle at the window and twin beds. There is the big front room with the big double bed, and there are two single rooms connected with a bath.

The mutual friend telephoned to me about it and I said to her: "What do you want to do, help them to stay divorced, or bring them together again?"

ROMANTIC SETTING

I told her that for my part I would put them in the two single rooms with the connecting bath, with the roses at one window and the yellow jasmine at the other. And there is a moon, and two of the ranch hands are Mexicans who play the guitar and sing all kinds of crooning songs. And if the two Mexicans should bring their guitars to the terrace when the moon is full and everything is very quiet and you can scent the apricots ripening in the orchards—well, if they are still divorced I shouldn't try to bring about a reconciliation.

There is no terrible quarrel between the man and his divorced wife.

There is no "other man" and there's never been the slightest hint of "another woman."

But the man hates dancing and the theater bores him to death. He can't bear parties and he likes to read aloud from the books he is reading, and the books he reads weigh a ton apiece more or less, and they are all about ancient man, or whither are we drifting.

DANCE MAD

The woman has to dance—she just has to dance or die. And she loves to tie her head in a scarlet handkerchief and put curtain rings in her ears and snatch the silver tray off the dining room sideboard and do a Salome—just like that! And she loves the theater and is a perfect fiend for parties — beach parties, with mussels steaming in a big pot and somebody singing:

"Oh, ain't you lovin' that sweet abalone.
That sweet salt abalone — we-e-ll."

And when she reads she reads the "Passionate Bride" or "Hot Love and Cold Regret." But the man and the woman cannot endure each other one hour longer so she is going one way and he's going the other—she with her black hair and her black eyes and her batik smocks and he with his grizzled hair and his tired blue eyes and his cynical smile.

You can't blame them very much for that, can you?

THE PRICE OF FAME

We're told the great grow very tired
Of all the kindly public's praises;
That peace is more to be desired
Than adulation's empty phrases.
In magazines and books we read
Long articles by persons famous
About the dreary lives they lead,
Penned to discredit and to shame us.

We are the public who delight
To hail with joy our giant heroes.
We swarm about them day and night.
They are the figures! We the zeroes!
We are the pomp and pride of kings;
The happy end of every story.
We are the triumph victory brings,
We are the bitter cost of glory.

We are the people; swarm and herd.
We are the eyes of recognition.
By us at last to be preferred
Is every normal man's ambition.
And yet how soon the ardor cools!
Scarce with the laurel have we crowned them
Before they write of us as fools
And make us wish we'd never found them.

Human Side of the News; Slaughter for Sale!

By Edwin C. Hill

Slaughter for sale! There is money in war, big money. There are huge profits even in incitements to war. Clever salesmen, schooled in the subtle school of that strange old master of the game, Sir Basil Zaharoff, exert Machiavellian influences upon cabinets and chancelleries, buy up generals, employ spies to provoke resentment, suspicion and enmity. One sale creates another.

There is no such thing as ruinous competition in the game of munitions murder.

If France's Schneider-Creusot sells a large bill of goods to Rumania, Czechoslovakia's Skoda will sell a larger one to Bulgaria. Machine guns at $140 apiece. French 75's at $8,000 apiece. Tanks at $25,000 each. Bombing planes at $100,000 a plane.

These are typical items in the price lists of the astute gentlemen who go on rubberheels from capital to capital, conveying injurious gossip as well as business propositions.

PROBLEM OF PEACE

If there is anything clear at all in the whole muddled world, it is that something will have to be done about the munition makers as war makers if peace is ever going to come to this earth. The League of Nations makes no bones about characterizing the munitions makers of Europe for what they are. Here are five indictments drawn up by the League's Temporary Mixed Commission:

1—Been active in fomenting war scares and in persuading their own countries to adopt warlike policies and to increase their armaments.

2—Attempted to bribe government officials both at home and abroad.

3—Disseminated false reports concerning the military and naval expenditures of various countries in order to stimulate armament expenditures.

4—Sought to influence public opinion through the control of newspapers in their own and foreign countries.

5—Organized international armament rings through which the armaments race has been accentuated by playing off one country against the other.

6—Organized international armament trusts which have increased the price of armaments to governments.

GREAT ARMS MAKERS

The great arms firms of the world include Schneider-Creusot in France, Mitsui in Japan and Skoda in Czechoslovakia.

They and their subsidiaries probably account for most of the world's arms productions. Explosives and ammunition are provided for by a dif[illegible] group of firms closely al[illegible] to the arms firms.

The Schneider concern is a key company in the French steelmakers association, the celebrated Comite' des Forges, which supplies it with its steel. Schneider sells all over the world.

Its profits in 1930 were 26,000,000 francs. Skoda is the chief arms purveyor to the Balkans. It has also done plenty of business with Japan and China. In 1929 and 1930 Skoda declared dividends of 28½ per cent.

The chief Italian arms firms are Breda in Milan and Ansaldo in Turin. Their markets are chiefly Spain and Greece. The U. S. S. R. exports no arms, but in 1930 the Bolsheviks, fearing war in the Far East spent 568,000,000 rubles importing munitions, and in 1931 251,000,000, a serious drain on the Five-Year-Plan.

More than 90 per cent of the total arms exports of the world comes from ten countries. Great Britain alone accounted for 32.6 per cent of the total world arms traffic in 1929, 30.5 per cent in 1930, and 38.2 per cent in 1931. Switzerland with 10.8 per cent, France with 7.8 per cent, Italy with 6.4 per cent, and Belgium with 4.3 per cent. The great importing nations are China, India, the British colonies and the South American republics.

LACE WHOLE WORLD

China alone bought 11.1 per cent of the world's exports of arms in 1931. Germany is forbidden to export or import munitions of war. The arms firms, extraordinarily interrelated and intertwined, lace the whole world in their net.

Krupp, once the great German arms firm—it employed 70,000 men in its big days—is supposed to control the Bofors Ordnance Company, in Sweden, which is affiliated with the Nobel interests. Krupp has also connections in Holland and Switzerland. The arms companies sell to each side in any war. They sell to friend and foe alike.

Munitions stocks skyrocketed on the Paris bourse from the time Hitler came to power in Germany. Previously, on publication of the MacDonald disarmament scheme, they had fallen sharply. Later, they wavered when the World Economic Conference convened; they soared again when it adjourned in failure.

For the munitions kings real wars would be swell, but they do very nicely, thank you, on warm alarms.

Roosevelt's Ship Program Called 'Too Vague'

By James T. Williams, Jr.

President Roosevelt's assurances regarding the future of the American merchant marine would be more encouraging if they were less vague.

Mr. Roosevelt is quoted as saying that the United States intends to have and maintain an "adequate" merchant marine. Unfortunately, he does not say what he means by "adequate," or what methods he thinks should be employed to give the country the kind of merchant marine which he says the country wants.

EXPANSION NEEDED

In the merchant marine act of 1920, Congress declared it to be the policy of the United States "to carry the greater portion of the commerce of the United States in its own merchant marine, which might also serve as a military or naval auxiliary in time of war." It was declared, further, to be our policy to do whatever was necessary to encourage and maintain such a marine and the shipping board was directed to keep always in view this purpose and object as the primary end to be obtained.

Congress reaffirmed this policy and primary purpose in the Jones-White act of 1928, which provided for the further development of an American merchant marine and for the assurance of its permanence in the transportation of the foreign trade of the United States and for other purposes.

In view of the fact that only one-third of the foreign trade of the United States is today carried in American ships, while one-third is carried in British ships and one-third in other foreign flag ships, it is obvious that there must be considerable expansion of the American merchant marine if established American policy is to be pursued to the end that "the greater part of our foreign trade may be carried in American ships."

By an "adequate" merchant marine, Congress has repeatedly declared that it meant one large enough to carry "the greater part" of our foreign trade in our own ships. If by "adequate" President Roosevelt means the same thing, then the expansion of the American merchant marine under his administration as the law provides would seem to be assured.

This, however, is not what his Secretary of Agriculture meant when, in a recent letter to the chairman of the House committee on merchant marine and fisheries, Mr. Wallace wrote to Congressman Bland of Virginia:

"WALLACE MISUNDERSTOOD"

"Any further governmental encouragement of the shipping industry by subsidy or similar measures would tend to divert the energies of our people in some degree in shipping as compared with other industries.

"Allowing foreigners to carry a large percentage of our trade promotes our commodity exports, for it means that foreigners have more purchasing power with which to buy them.

"If we further protect shipping, we shall export less of our farm commodities."

Yet Mr. Roosevelt is quoted as saying that Secretary Wallace really "subscribes to the President's views on shipping" and that the letter of his secretary of agriculture has been misunderstood.

Unfortunately, the administration persists in its refusal to make public the complete text of this extraordinary letter of Mr. Wallace or any part of the text of the letter of Congressman Bland, which brought forth the reply of Mr. Wallace, or to say wherein this correspondence has been misunderstood.

Meantime, the real purposes of the administration in regard to the future of the American merchant marine are further clouded by a public statement from the Assistant secretary of Commerce, Mr. Dickinson, who, while favoring Federal aid for American shipping, says:

"We are already buying approximately two-thirds of our shipping service from foreigners. This leaves the foreigner an ample margin of payment from shipping services to purchase large quantities of American exported goods."

Is the public to infer from this assertion that President Roosevelt's assistant secretary of commerce is willing to limit the American merchant marine to its present strength and thereby permit foreign shipping to continue to carry two-thirds of the overseas trade of this country? Is that what Mr. Dickinson has in mind and would that constitute in the opinion of Mr. Roosevelt, an "adequate" merchant marine?

WAIT CONGRESS ACTION

If Congress were in session, the real attitude of the administration toward the American merchant marine could be quickly clearified by the adoption of a joint resolution of the two Houses calling upon the administration to take the American people into its confidence by making public all recent exchanges between the British Foreign Office and the American department of state regarding Sir John Simon's proposal that the United States enter an International conference for the specific purpose of agreeing by treaty to abolish or limit further Federal aid to American shipping.

The publication of this correspondence might throw a flood of light upon the question whether the American Congress and the Roosevelt administration agree in their definition of what constitutes an "adequate" American merchant marine, and how best such a merchant marine can be built and maintained.
